

EXECUTIVE SESSION ON MONROE DOCTRINE

DISCUSSION ON MAGDALENA BAY CASE TOUCHES GOVERNMENT SECRETS IN SENATE TODAY.

SENATOR LODGE TALKS

Declares That Resolution Now Being Considered Rests on Broader Ground Than Present Monroe Doctrine.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 2.—Before the senate had proceeded far with the Magdalena Bay resolution today discussion began to touch so close to government secrets that the doors were closed and consideration went on in executive session.

Senator Lodge calling on the resolution which is framed to record the disapproval with which the United States would view the acquisition of any property by foreign interests on the western hemisphere which might eventually become military or naval bases, declared that its passage was in the interest of peace.

"The committee on foreign relations believed it wise that the United States should make its position known and should not let a situation arise in which it might be necessary to urge a friendly nation to withdraw when that nation could not do so without humiliation," said he.

"This merely is a statement of policy, to make clear the position this nation will take under such circumstances." The resolution declared the United States could not see "without grave concern" the title to any advantageous position on the American continent pass into the control of a foreign corporation that might be dominated by a foreign government.

"What is the real meaning of this resolution as it affects the Monroe Doctrine?" asked Senator Cummins. "Is it an extension or further application of that principle?"

"The declaration rests on a much broader and older ground than the Monroe Doctrine," replied Senator Lodge. "This resolution rests on the generally accepted principle that every nation has a right to protect its own safety and if it feels that the possession of any given harbor or place is prejudicial to its safety it is its duty and right to intervene."

Senator Lodge said the Monroe Doctrine did not touch on the precise Bay case. "In this particular case," he said, "it became apparent from the inquiries we made that no government was trying to get hold of Magdalena Bay. But it did become apparent that certain people were trying to dispose of the same about the Bay to a foreign corporation while a government takes no possession of a place itself, possession may be taken by a foreign corporation that would be under the control of the government."

Senator Lodge added that the opening of the Panama Canal gave to Magdalena Bay an importance it did not have before possessed as the Panama routes pass in front of it.

Senator Cummins expressed the opinion that the resolution did not make clear the relation between a foreign government and a foreign corporation.

"I do not deem it wise for the United States to say that the stock of a corporation owning land around Magdalena Bay should not be held by citizens at another country without some relation of stock holding to their government," said he.

Senator Cummins warned the government from taking a position from which it might be compelled to "cede" with challenge and humiliation.

Mr. Stone called for more information and thereupon Senator Root moved that the senate consider the resolution behind closed doors and an executive session was ordered.

After a three hour debate behind closed doors the senate today, 51 to 4, adopted the Lodge resolution defining the attitude of the United States in disapproval of the acquisition by foreign interests of any territory on the western hemisphere which might be used as military or naval bases or menace "the approaches" of this country.

The senators voting against the resolution were Cummins and McCumber, republicans, and Percy and Stone, democrats.

An amendment offered by Senator McCumber to take out of the resolution the reference to "corporations or associations which have relations to another government" was defeated.

MAKES POSITION OF CANADA VERY CLEAR

Canadians Will Contribute For Warships, But Must Be Consulted As To Expenditures, Says Premier.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] London, Aug. 2.—Robert L. Borden, prime minister of the dominion of Canada, who this week invited British cabinet ministers to visit Canada, has during his visit to London, made his position very clear on the subject of the naval assistance that Canada is to offer the mother country.

Mr. Borden and his colleagues told the British cabinet that Canada is prepared to assist Great Britain to maintain her naval supremacy, but when she does so she will want to be consulted as to the way the money is spent.

When Mr. Borden and his colleagues arrived it was announced with a great flourish that they came with an offer to contribute a squadron of four dreadnaughts to England. This was accepted by the public so there is certain to be some disappointment when the part Canada proposes to take finally is settled. Mr. Borden himself says this will not be until after his return to Canada and he has had an opportunity of consulting with the full cabinet.

LATEST CAPTURE IS GIVEN THIRD DEGREE

Jack Lewis, Implicated in Rosenthal Murder, Taken by Detective Yesterday and Questioned Today.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] New York, Aug. 2.—"Whitley" Jack Lewis, one of the four men accused of shooting down the gambler, Hermann Rosenthal, was given a third degree grilling today to glean further information that would corroborate the confession of "Bald Jack" Rose, Harry Vallon and "Bridge" Wehber that Police Lieutenant Becker sought the death of Rosenthal.

Lewis, whose real name is Frank Seidenshine, was picked up yesterday on the station platform at Fleischmanns, New York, just as he was about to take a train for the west. Lewis was brought to this city today by Detective Hardy.

The trip to this city was without incident until the train drew into a Weehaken terminal. There a band of six or seven east side "gangsters" leaped over the gates and started toward the train. Suddenly their eyes fell upon several headquarters detectives who had been sent across the river to assist Detective Hardy, and the "gangsters" slunk back into the station.

Lewis said he was on the train at the time of giving himself up as he heard the police wanted him. He would not say where he had been in hiding. He asserted he was out of the city at the time Rosenthal was shot to death.

Detectives, it is thought, are on the trail of other gun men wanted in the case, including Harry Horowitz, otherwise "Gib the Blood," and Louis Rosenberg, alias "Lefty Louis."

"Lefty Louis" is said to have been in Boston on Wednesday. District Attorney Whitman, when asked about the report that it was the bullet from Rosenberg's gun that killed Rosenthal, remarked:

"Yes, I have heard that it was the bullet from 'Lefty Louis' gun that killed Rosenthal, but that does not lessen the crime of the others engaged in the murder. They are equally guilty with him. I am anxious to get hold of all of them. They are a danger to the community."

Whitman to Boston. During the forenoon District Attorney Whitman left for Boston where he is expected to stay until Monday. It was said he would stay on some end of the case while away.

The report that "Lefty Louis" had been seen recently in Boston is believed to have no bearing on the tip.

DEMOCRATS DECIDE ON A WOOL TARIFF AT MEETING TODAY

Leaders Agree To Introduce Measure Similar To That Voted By President Last Summer—Steel Conference.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Washington, Aug. 2.—An agreement between democratic leaders of the house and senate to frame a compromise wool bill similar to that President Taft vetoed last summer was reached early today following the meeting of the conference on the iron and steel bill. The latter was expected to finally be passed in both houses today. A meeting of the wool tariff conferees will held tonight.

Senator Simmons, representing the democratic progressive alliance of the senate and Representative Underwood, democratic house leader, agreed to such a compromise.

The iron and steel conferees proceeded today in accordance with the arranged program. All senate amendments to the house bill were agreed to with the exception that Representative Underwood in reporting to the house should move that the house insist on the removal of the reciprocal amendment from the bill.

Following the reporting of that action to the senate Senator Simmons was to move that the senate recede from the reciprocal amendment and have the support of democrats and progressives in that action. The steel and iron tariff bill then would go directly to President Taft.

The compromise on the wool bill will be on the basis of 29% duty on raw wool and instead of 20% as in the house bill and 35% as in the La Follette bill.

On yarns the La Follette rate of 45% and the bonus rate of 30% will be compromised at 35%.

On ready made clothing knit fabrics women's dress goods and the like the La Follette rate of 55% and the house rates from 35 to 50% will be compromised at 49%.

The iron and steel revision bill proposes an average duty on all classes of imports of about 22% compared with an average under the Payne Aldrich law of about 34%.

GOVERNOR WILSON IS CHEERFUL AT WORK

Democratic Candidate Wades Through Piles of Letters But Finds Time To Greet Friends.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Sea Girt, Aug. 2.—Through stacks of back correspondence Governor Woodrow Wilson picked his way today facing constant interruption from callers.

"I feel about my correspondence," he said with a smile, "very much like the frog that tried to get out of a well. Every time he jumped up two feet he fell back one."

Notwithstanding his strenuous days, Governor Wilson says that he is in excellent health. His recent vacation trip had a beneficial effect even though he admits he is not accustomed to sailing.

Joseph E. Davies, secretary of the national committee, who was in conference with the governor today early, suggested another sea trip soon but Governor Wilson answered with an impromptu flourish:

"I wish that my room had a floor, 'I don't so much care for a door, 'But this walking around, without touching the ground."

"It's getting to be such a bore."

Formal announcement was made today by Gov. Wilson that he will not resign the governorship of New Jersey during his campaign for the presidency.

Gov. Wilson is keenly interested in prospective reports from committees investigating the tax problem and the efficiency of state affairs in New Jersey and prominent democrats have asked him not to forsake his office until called to a higher one.

Conference With Davies. Sea Girt, Aug. 2.—Gov. Wilson gave his attention last night and early today to the problem of organization of the national democratic committee.

Joseph E. Davies of Wisconsin secretary of the committee, talked with the nominee and the governor afterwards said the delay in organization was due to the earnest desire of the committee to make thorough preparations for the division of campaign labor.

Nearly 300 letters were received by Gov. Wilson today from Californians who signed themselves former members of the Champ Clark league of California. They declared they would "cheerfully abide by the decisions of the Baltimore convention." Many of the letters contained campaign contributions.

CLOSE CONTESTS AT MISSOURI PRIMARY

Five Democratic Candidates For Governor Will Be Voted On Next Tuesday—Republicans Fight.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Jefferson City, Mo., Aug. 2.—A State-wide primary will be held in Missouri next Tuesday to determine whom the respective parties will put upon the November ballots for State, judicial, congressional and county offices. Five parties have filed nominations for the primary ballot. The Democrats and Republicans have full tickets, but the Socialists, Socialist Laborites and Prohibitionists have some vacancies.

Contrary to the situation existing in many States this year, national politics is not expected to play a very important part in the State campaign in Missouri. Some attempt has been made to inject the Clark-Wilson contest into the fight for the Democratic gubernatorial nomination, but without much success.

On the Republican side, the rivalry between the Taft and Roosevelt followers in manifesting itself in a fight for control of the State Organization, but the outcome of that fight and the fate of the party will draw little attention to the presidential contest in making up the State ticket.

The Roosevelt people are focusing their efforts on the election of county chairmen with a view of capturing control of the State committee and the State organization later on.

Five aspirants are contesting for the Democratic nomination for governor. William S. Cowherd of Kansas City, former congressman and the Democratic nominee for governor four years ago, and Elliot M. Major of Bowling Green, at present attorney general, are conceded to be the leaders in the race. Cowherd is generally looked upon as the favorite, since he has the backing of Senators Stone and Reed and other members of the "organization" which has long controlled the Democratic party in Missouri.

The other three who seek to head the Democratic State ticket are David A. Ball of Louisiana, who claims he was ousted out of Governor's favor in 1908; August H. Bolle of St. Louis, former lieutenant governor, and James A. Houchin, a millionaire contractor of Jefferson City.

The race for the Republican gubernatorial nomination started with five entries, but within a week or two the field has been narrowed by the withdrawal of two of the candidates. Those remaining in the running are John C. McKinley of Unionville, former lieutenant governor; Leon W. Quick, city treasurer of St. Louis, and Arthur P. Murphy of Rolla, a former representative in Congress.

Spirited contests are on for some of the congressional nominations. The Democrats who announced in the Ninth district when it appeared likely that Speaker Champ Clark might go from the Capitol to the White House have since withdrawn, leaving Mr. Clark unopposed for re-nomination without opposition in their own party are Lloyd of the First, Alexander of the Third, Dickinson of the Sixth, Shackelford of the Eighth, Catlin of Eleventh, Hensley of the Thirteenth, Russell of the Fourteenth and Rueby of the Sixteenth.

The gubernatorial candidates of the minor parties, each of whom will receive the nomination unopposed, will be: Socialist, William A. Ward of St. Louis; Socialist Labor, Charles Rogers of Kansas City, and Prohibition, Charles E. Stokes of Kansas City.

OVERTURE OF PEACE VIGOROUSLY DENIED BY GENERAL OROZCO

Leader of Mexican Rebels Declares That Federals Were Giving Out Stories To Injure Rebel Cause.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] El Paso, Aug. 2.—Pasqual Orozco, chief of the Mexican rebels said today that he has not sought peace terms for himself or for any of his men. Orozco was asked about a report from Mexico city last night that the rebels were to test the temper of the government as to possible peace conditions.

Orozco denied the report. He said the "fighting was just beginning" and that "there could be no peace as long as Madero remained president."

The rebel chief asserted that "Mexico city was giving out stories that we have asked for peace, as means of injuring the rebel cause in the eyes of foreign nations."

Still in Juarez. Gen. Orozco remains in Juarez although the federal army took the town of Madera from the rebels and now is marching north toward Casas Grandes whence Orozco has been supposed to be intending to retreat.

Only a few rebel bands are reported between Madera and Casas Grandes and the federals ought to be able to get to Casas Grandes in a few hours. If they get there it would cut Orozco off from retreat into Sonora.

It is understood that all American women and children have fled from the fighting zone. Nearly 1,500 refugees have arrived in El Paso since last Sunday night.

Indians in Revolt. Mexico City, Aug. 2.—Sierra Juarez Indians in the state of Oaxaca have renewed their revolt against the government. It is reported today that a large body of the warriors is marching on Ixtlan 40 miles from that state capital. A mix-up over distribution of land is at the bottom of the trouble.

Several weeks ago the Indians revolted after an argument over the land question, but under promise of amnesty they put aside their arms. Now they claim the amnesty was not complete and the government executed several of the insurgent leaders.

GRACE CASE TAKEN TO THE JURY TODAY

Completion of Arguments and Court's Instruction Mark Ending of Sensational Trial at Atlanta.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 2.—Completion of argument and the court's instructions were all that remained to be done today before the jury would be called upon to decide whether the lure of $25,000 life insurance tempted Mrs. Daisy Opie Grace to shoot and attempt to murder her boyish husband.

Extra precautions have been taken to prevent any persons from talking or communicating with the jurors. A deputy sheriff has been constantly with them in their quarters in a local hotel.

Announcement was made today that Eugene H. Grace, the husband in the shooting case, would soon file suit for divorce. It also was said that charges might be brought against Rebecca Sams, the mulatto dressmaker who testified for the defense, accusing her of tampering with state witnesses.

Grace, who has heard the trial from his cot, was not present for the final act in the court drama today. Outside of branding it as false, he has made no further comment on the statement of his wife that he was shot by a revolver in his own hands during a scuffle with her in their home over papers which would have given him control over her property.

Grace, under Georgian laws, could not testify against his wife.

Counsel for Daisy Grace, accused of having attempted to kill her husband charged that lawyers for the state had willfully withheld evidence in their prosecution. The charge was made by Mrs. Grace's lawyers.

They argued today for her acquittal. They accused state attorneys of executing a "theatrical plot" when they brought Grace wounded into court and said it was aimed to cause Mrs. Grace to collapse.

VOTE ON STRIKE IS TAKEN IN CHICAGO

Street Railway Employees Complain of High Cost of Living and Low Wages.

[BY ASSOCIATED PRESS.] Chicago, Aug. 2.—Employees of the street railway lines in Chicago began voting at 4:00 a. m. today on whether a strike is to be declared. The polls are to close at 4 a. m. tomorrow and in a few hours the result will be known.

The threatened strike involves 3,900 men on the south side surface lines, 6,700 men on the north and west side surface lines, and 2,700 men on the elevated lines.

The men are demanding more wages. They contend that their average wage is less than $300 a year, whereas the cost of living for an average family is $1,200 a year.

If a strike is voted for both sides, the tying up of Chicago's transportation facilities may be avoided. Another conference between the officials of the union and the railways is to be held, and the date for the company's answer to the demands has been set for August 19.

W. D. Mahon, president of the Amalgamated Association of Electric and Street Railway Employees, has announced that the wage scale must be decided for both the surface and the elevated employees.

The Value of a Second Pair of Trousers in the Making of History

By J. R. HAMILTON Former Advertising Manager Wana-maker's, Philadelphia.

In ways too numerous to relate, the lack of any trousers whatever have been the making of much history. But this article refers more to things modern and economic rather than to those primeval, pantsless days in the hazy past.

Unfortunately, the possession of two pairs of trousers has been looked upon as an extra safeguard against economic conservation of clothes. And, the male portion of the human race being more or less careless of future contingencies, this extra pair of trousers has been long in coming into favor.

Two pairs with the following astonishing results: The clothing factories of the United States, and in fact, of the entire world, are running longer on full time than they ever did before. Some several thousand more men are employed at good wages. Many stores are as busy in the summer as they are in the winter time.

While, as for you, the consumer, you have more clothes in your wardrobe than you ever had before; they last longer, they cost less, and you are better dressed than any of your ancestors ever hoped to be.

This has all come about through that wonderful bit of wisdom which has percolated at last through the male cerebrum, to wit: That one coat and vest will wear as long as two pairs of trousers.

Now you who have not caught this idea before, when you look through these big clearance sales in today's paper, can just say shrewdly to yourselves, "If I buy this $25.00 suit for $16.50 and then get an extra pair of trousers to go with it not only will I be dressed all the rest of this season, but when next season comes I shall be the first man with a new suit, for which I have paid little more than half price."

This lends a greater interest to all those clearance sales, doesn't it?

Indeed, if a few more hundred thousand men would learn to follow the advertising and to buy goods out of season as well as in season, the cost of everything we have to wear would be materially reduced.

Try it this season; go over the advertising now. Pick out the things you can wear this year and next year to. Buy them now at about half price and see how much fatter your pocketbook is when the same season rolls around again.

ROBBERY CHARGE LIE; SHEARERS CONFESSES

Defendants Dismissed on Larceny Charge—All Get Eleven Days in Jail for Being Intoxicated. What yesterday promised to be a sensational and somewhat prolonged trial of the three assailants of John Shearers on the charge of assault with intent to rob and larceny, this morning dwindled almost to a vanishing point, when Shearers, in response to the questions of District Attorney Stanley Dunwiddie, declared that he had not been robbed, and that the charge of larceny was a bold faced lie. The district attorney then moved that the defendants, John Kennedy, Joe McGee, and Harry Mandel be dismissed, which Judge Fifield granted. The defendants, together with the complainant, were at once re-arrested on the charge of being drunk and disorderly, to which all pleaded guilty and in default of a fine of $10 and costs each were sentenced to eleven days imprisonment in the county jail. Shearers persisted in the charge that he was robbed until this morning, and his complete denial of it came as a surprise to the district attorney, who nevertheless had been gradually led to doubt the story. According to his latest account he had been working at Knapp, Wisconsin, where he earned $5, and from there went his way to Chicago and then to this city. He had spent all his money before he came to Jansville. Here he earned fifty cents late Tuesday morning by cleaning out a cistern. This he spent for liquor. With his companions he indulged in a drinking bout near the Croak brewery. They gave him fifteen cents to buy some liquor but he never returned with it. He claimed that he had been eating opium and was not responsible for his earlier statements made to the police. Five witnesses, George C. Smith, John Kelley, yardmaster for the St. Paul railway, and Mrs. Belle Micka, were summoned, but none of them were called to the stand. All were witnesses of the assault or of the escape of Shearers' assailants.

The church will be erected on the lot owned by the society at the corner of Academy and Pleasant streets. The lot will be staked out this week and excavation will begin immediately afterward. The building will be constructed of gray brick and have a cement finish. Its lines will be simple but effective and pleasing. The interior will also be of simple design. The auditorium will be commodious and airy, and in front of it will be a roomy foyer. It is not intended to finish the basement of the church until later. For some time past the Scientists have been holding their services in the Phoebe block on West Milwaukee street. This has been purchased by the Odd Fellows, who will convert the quarters now used by them into club rooms.

PROHIBITION LEADER WILL SPEAK IN CITY

Oliver W. Stewart Will Give Address in Jansville During Tour of State, Beginning, on August 11. Oliver W. Stewart, who is considered one of the greatest orators of the Prohibition reform, will spend a week in Wisconsin, beginning August 11th. His program for that day will take him to Albion, Milton Junction, Beloit, Jansville and Evansville. On Monday, August 12th, Stewart will begin a strenuous automobile campaign speaking from six to ten places a day. His itinerary for Monday the 12th is as follows: Morning; Magnolia, Footville, Orfordville, and Brodhead. Afternoon; Albany, Belleville, Brooklyn and Oregon, finishing up the day with a big mass meeting in Madison, probably in the Assembly Chamber. On Tuesday, August 13th, he will visit Sun Prairie, Token, Windsor, Deforest and Lodi in the morning and Baraboo, North Freedom, Ablesmans in the afternoon. In the evening, he will address a big mass meeting at Reedsburg in the public park. Stewart was prominently mentioned as prospective candidate for President this year but declined to accept. His friends, however, will insist on his candidacy in some future campaign as he has many admirers both within and without the party ranks. He is a very clever speaker, was the Prohibition party member of the Illinois legislature in 1892 and was National Chairman for several years. It is believed that he will be greeted with big audiences wherever he goes.

WILL RAISE SALARY OF SEALER'S OFFICE

Probable That Council Will Increase It From $200 to $400—Held Civil Service Examination Soon. That the salary of the City Sealer will probably be increased within a short time from $200 to $400 a year, was the statement made by Mayor James A. Fathers, this afternoon when approached on the question of the city's action consequent to the resignation of Frank M. Kennedy as Sealer of Weights and Measures. Although the Sealer would not have to devote his entire time to the work, he would have to give such a large part of it that no one who is competent can be secured for the present salary. Mr. Kennedy was the only one who passed the last civil service examination for the position. Immediately after the resignation of Mr. Kennedy the City Clerk wrote the State Civil Service Commission to have them make arrangements for a second examination. In their reply they stated that they could conduct an examination in this city on August 23. Mayor Fathers wrote that this date or a later one would be satisfactory. He is now awaiting a letter giving the exact date of the examination which will probably be held at the high school. Three have obtained and are studying the state laws on weights and measures and will probably file applications for the position.

Port Shot by Dan McCort

When Fred Clarke, manager of the Pittsburgh Pirates, announced at the beginning of the season that he would not play in the outfield again under any circumstances nobody took him seriously. There were a lot of persons who were willing to wager that he would play in the outfield before the season was half over. Clarke took them up, betting suits of clothes, hats and other wearing apparel. He was as good as his word and now he has a wardrobe which will not need replenishing for some time to come.

With the season closing on September 2, the Central League teams have entered upon the home stretch. It looks now as if there would be a thrilling finish, with five teams straining for the pennant. These five are St. Louis, Chicago, Cleveland, Philadelphia and Washington. The action of President Meyer, of the Springfield club, in sending Manager O'Day and a quartet of his star players to Indianapolis may effect seriously the chances of the Reapers for the pennant. However, Manager Hendry, who succeeds O'Day at Springfield, is very cheerful and insists his team has the best show of winning first place.

Ulan (158 3-4), king of trotters, as well as the other famous horses of C. K. G. Billings, string, now in Russia, will be shipped to this country soon. It was planned to exhibit the horses in Vienna and Berlin this summer, but owing to their poor health the owner has decided to bring them back at once. On June 13 Ulan trotted a trial over the Moscow track in 2:04—four full seconds faster than any other horse ever showed in Russia. He seemed to have a brilliant season ahead of him, but a little later was taken ill, and has not been harnessed for many weeks.

Owen Moran will do no more fighting in Los Angeles. That town is particular and has barred him because he used unfair tactics in his fight with Jack White. In a contest at Syracuse recently Moran lost on a foul to Charley White. The Briton has seen better days; he is only a remnant of the great fighter he was when he trimmed Nelson.

Prosperity has struck the Washington club in the American league. The Washington Star asserts that the club's profits this season will not be exceeded by any club in either of the major leagues. No doubt this is due to the fact that Washington has a real team this year. There are more fans willing to spend a half dollar for a ball game in the capital this year than ever before.

President Hedges of the St. Louis Browns says that Baumgartner and C. Brown will be star twirlers for his team next year. He would like to grab off Raphael Almeida, but the Cuban will be retained by the Cincinnati Reds, and will return to Cincinnati as soon as the Southern league season is over.

AUTOMOBILES ARE TESTED CAREFULLY AT FACTORY.

One motorist who delights in rather than objects to bad roads is the automobile tester.

There is no more picturesque figure in the automobile industry than the road tester mounted on a stripped chassis with a frail looking seat. He speeds along city streets and open country roads the worst he can find, subjecting his car to all kinds of tests and tuning it up so that it may leave the factory in perfect running order. To the citizens of the city where automobiles are built, the tester passes by without much attention, but to the visitor from districts where motor car manufacturing is not established the men who try out the cars are always a source of great interest.

The automobile to the tester is as the broncho to the cowboy, and it seems as though the testers call upon their machines to do about as many feats.

It is the tester that takes the complete chassis sent to him from the Assembly Department and works it into a smoothly running unit. If there is a fault in construction, material, adjustment, or workmanship, it is up to him to find it. To do this he relies upon bad road conditions. To the tester a sand street, steep hill or muddy league it gives him a chance to test the car. Especially severe is the road test given the R-C-H cars.

About four miles from the R-C-H

DOYLE BELIEVES IN SCIENCE OF BUNTING

Larry Doyle.

"One of the first things that a batter should learn is bunting—how to lay the ball down, as ball players say," recently declared Larry Doyle, of the New York Giants. "The value of the bunt can't be overestimated. When a bunt is wanted it is wanted badly, and while the Giants seldom use it, every New York player is supposed to be able to lay down a bunt when it is called for."

factory there is a strip of sand road that would strike terror to the heart of the average motorist. Putting a car through this is one of the hardest features of the test. Through the strip of seemingly bottomless sand the R-C-H testers take their cars. First they take it on the run on high gear, going through the entire length without shifting if possible. They then come back and deliberately stop in one of the worst spots and give the car the task of pulling out of the sand. At first the sand flies in clouds as these photographs plainly show. A slip would mean the landing of the car in a ditch far below the road level. It is dangerous, exciting and strenuous, but it is all in the life of a tester and the supreme test for a chassiss. It is far more strenuous than any car would be called upon to do in anything like ordinary conditions, but its extremeness makes it more efficient.

CANADIAN OARSMEN IN ANNUAL REGATTA

Many Notable Entries in Canadian Henley Which Opened At St. Catharines, Ontario, Today.

St. Catharines, Ont., Aug. 2.—The annual regatta of the Canadian Association of Amateur Oarsmen, popularly known as the Canadian Henley, opened with the promise of going on record as the most successful regatta in the history of the association. The entry for this year is of an unusually high class. The proximity in dates has served to keep the Winnipeg and other western oarsmen away, but the best of the Maritime provinces and the United States have more representatives here than ever before. The regatta program covers two days and provides for all of the customary events, from single sculls to the eight-oared races. Alfred Seaton, of Halifax, the amateur sculling champion of the Maritime provinces, is reckoned a strong contender for the senior sculling championship. Dave Regan of Buffalo, who last year showed himself to be one of the strongest oarsmen on the continent, is entered in the intermediates. Other well-known individual oarsmen and crews are here from Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton, Detroit and several other points.

SCOUTS LEFT TODAY ON HIKE TO AFTON

Will Make First Use of New Tents in Camp on River Bank This Evening—Return Tomorrow.

Over a dozen scouts composed the squad which left on the hike to Afton under the direction of Scoutmaster Jucke early this morning. Everything required for the trip was carried by the boys who dispensed with a baggage van on this occasion. The boys carried their new tents which were received this week and will use them for the first time in their camp tonight somewhere on the river bank below Afton. The boys expect to return by tomorrow noon.

Scouts who go on these hikes will be given credit by Mr. Jucke and their actions while under his charge will count for or against them in determining what boys shall be favored for the Palmyra trip. The interest taken in the scout games and activities will also be taken into consideration.

On the trip today among other things the birds common to this vicinity will be observed and each scout will keep a record of the number of birds that he identified. Following is a list submitted by Scout Commissioner Buckmaster: Robin, blue-bird, red-wing black-bird, yellow-head black-bird, cow-bird, bob-o-link, gold finch, belted kingfisher, rathound black-bird, hairy woodpecker, downy woodpecker, flicker, chimney swift, hummingbird, king bird, kill-deer, turtle dove, pigeon dove, meadow lark, blue jay, thrush (several kinds), English sparrow, purple grackle, oriole, grosbeak, purple finch, cross bill, lark sparrow, chipping sparrow, field sparrow, junco, indigo bunting, scarlet tanager, cliff swallow, barn swallow, vireo (several kinds), warblers (several kinds), brown thrasher, cat bird, wrens (several kinds), nut hatches (several kinds), and shrike.

Another message has been hidden and the boys that do not go on the hike today will busy themselves in following the directions which have been outlined. Following are the directions:

Starting at the corner of Main and Milwaukee streets, go 100 yards south by southeast; 200 feet southwest and turn southeast to arrow on building; go 300 yards in direction arrow points to arrow from which go 100 yards northeast; turn southeast from arrow in grass; go 100 yards to arrow on post; 150 paces to arrow on ground; 40 paces to arrow on ground; 100 yds. southwest find arrow; turn southeast about 250 yards to large wood-pile; find arrow; also see pile of wire; go directly south about 125 yards to 3-story building; 75 yards to telephone post same direction; 35 yards to telephone post; 100 yards west now direction to store; south from store 150 yards to billboard; 125 yards over river; take note of arrows; from last arrow due east 24 paces; find arrow on part of tree; ten paces further find broken twigs pointing in direction of the narrow which in turn points to tree in hollow part of which message is hidden; broken twigs also point to part of tree in which message is hidden. When you find message, re-write it on paper to be given to Scoutmaster and replace original message as it was when you found it. A compass will be convenient in determining the directions.

GRIFITH AFRAID TO QUIT BASEBALL

Clark Griffith.

"I would be afraid to quit baseball after 25 years in it," said Clark Griffith, of the Washington Senators, recently. "I fear the lack of mental and physical excitement and strain would make a quick end of me. I suffer from inactivity in winter. If it were prolonged beyond spring I am convinced I would be unable to stand it."

WILL SPEND $25,000 FOR IMPROVEMENTS ON RACING COURSE

Men at Work Fixing Roadbed on Roads Near Milwaukee Over Which Automobile Races Will Be Run Next Fall.

Details of the beautiful course over which the Vanderbilt Cup, Grand Prize, Pabst trophy, and Wisconsin trophy events are to be run this fall, are quite interesting. Improved at a cost of more than $25,000, the roads will be in great condition in September and drivers and others who have seen the 3.2 mile circuit declare it to be superb. It lies in one of Milwaukee's most attractive and accessible city limit districts. It is on the northwest side in the township of Wauwatosa, noted for its fine roads. Public parks and rich, well-kept farms with groves provide the natural surroundings.

Beginning at the city limits intersection of North Fond du Lac road, Thirty-fifth street and Burleigh street the route proceeds westward along the city boundary line on Burleigh past Sherman park and several beautiful private grounds and groves for a distance of more than one mile to South Fond du Lac road where a wide, easy turn is made to the northwest between Holy Cross and Wanderers' Rest cemeteries.

Along South Fond du Lac road the route continues to the northwest; in direct line for nearly three miles to the town line road which separates Granville and Wauwatosa townships. Eastward on the town line road the course continues for more than one mile to North Fond du Lac road where the direction again changes to the southeast and the route continues directly for nearly three miles to the point of starting. The entire distance is about 3.2 miles.

The location of the start and finish line has not been definitely determined, but it will be on either North Fond du Lac road or Burleigh street near their city limits intersection, there being several very advantageous sites in the vicinity. The grandstands and the entire region of North Fond du Lac road and Burleigh street will be easily accessible from the heart of the city, thirty minutes by car line and fifteen minutes by automobile.

Three street car trunk lines from the heart of the city have their terminals in the immediate vicinity of the course, and four other cross town lines offer excellent service and can carry 200,000 persons to and from the course daily.

Burleigh street alone affords at least 7,000 feet of grandstands and parking space and there are many more good sites on North Fond du Lac road. There are excellent opportunities for special parking places at different points along the route.

More than 200 men already are rushing the work of fitting the road bed. Two of the largest and most effective road grading machines that could be procured are at work, also two 60 horse-power traction engines. On August 1 the force was increased to more than 350 men and more machinery will be brought into use as needed. The road work is under the immediate supervision of Michael Schmidt, who has supervised the construction of more than 600 miles of standard roadbed in the vicinity of Milwaukee.

The roads are the best of the macadam type. For the races they will be graded perfectly to a width of 30 feet for the entire distance of the course. To the macadam surface will be added three inches of No. 2 rock and two inches of crushed stone screenings. The whole will be surfaced by the application of a special grade of oil of about 70 per cent asphalt. The curves will be made safe and wide, the turn from Burleigh on to South Fond du Lac road having a sweep of more than 75 feet. Five concrete bridges and fourteen concrete culverts will be constructed.

Both the Fond du Lac roads, which constitute about three-fourths of the route have interesting histories, which incidentally are to their advantage as race routes. Since the early years of the nineteenth century they have been known throughout the middle west as "good roads." The South Fond du Lac road was a popular Indian trail between Milwaukee bay and the Fond du Lac region. Later it was a well kept military road, and finally settlers donated land and services and established an excellent highway which since has been maintained in the best possible condition. The North Fond du Lac road also was opened by settlers. For many years it was maintained in excellent condition as a private toll road. The town line road was one of the first in Wisconsin opened regularly by public authority and it always has been a model highway. Burleigh is a well kept street.

Wasps Kill Flies.
Miss Marian Black-Hawkins of Andover, England, domesticates wasps to kill flies and other insects that annoy careful housekeepers. She takes the young wasp, nearly starves it to death and then feeds it with honey, and after once or twice repeating this treatment the wasp is docile and will not sting the hand that feeds it. However, it is not likely that her example will be followed to any great extent.

The American Cat-Tail.
The cattail of the American swamps is almost exactly the same plant as the Egyptian bulrush. It is no longer used for making paper, as it once was, but from its rot is prepared an astringent medicine, while its stems, when prepared dry, are excellent for the manufacture of mats, chair-bottoms and the like.

The Reason.
The Dominie—How is it, my young friend, that your mother always does the carving when you have company to dinner? Freddie—Cause dad always says things while he's doing it. —Puck.

WANTS RECIPROCITY.

Despite the fact that Canada as a whole turned down the so-called Canadian reciprocity treaty, western Canada still persists in its loyalty to the cause of freer trade within the empire and reciprocity of commerce with the United States.

In the provincial elections of Saskatchewan last week, with this as the crucial issue, the electorate returned by a ratio of five to one members of parliament committed to support of the Liberal cause. In the campaign literature circulated by the Liberals and in their spokesmen's speeches the radical note of western opposition to further eastern domination of Dominion politics was struck, and it had its effect upon voters who were open to the sectional appeal. For this reason if for no other, the verdict is significant, and it registers history-making in a way parallel to the recent trend in the United States. As the vast reaches of the western provinces of the Dominion grow in population, as, with the opening of the Panama canal the cities and ports of the Pacific frontage gain in importance, Quebec and Ontario will have relatively less power, politically and economically considered.

The obstinacy shown by voters of Canada west in continuing to favor friendlier trade relations with the United States no doubt is disturbing to the conservative peace of mind; but it has its counterpart in the hope and faith of the veteran Liberal leader, Sir Wilfrid Laurier, who continues both to cherish and to utter the belief that the compact that he worked out with President Taft will some day be operative.

While the presidential campaign now engrosses the attention of the voters of the republic there is a minority carefully noting the way Canadian currents are running, and co-operating so far as possible in the effort to keep the American thought open and friendly to the idea of reciprocity.

CONSIDER CAREFULLY.

It is up to the voter who owns his own home, who must depend upon the prosperity of the community he lives in, to be most interested in the selection of candidates for the state senate and assembly. If you do not believe the many tales of industries planning to leave Wisconsin for some other state because of the income tax and other recent laws enacted under the name of reform, ask some manufacturer, who has his capital invested and who employs labor and see what he says. Beloit is liable to lose the big Berlin Machine company because of these laws, and stop and think what this would mean to Beloit. Janesville has several industries employing much labor, that have received flattering offers to remove to other states, and suppose they went? Would any other industry come here to take their place?

One of the candidates for the state senate makes the statement that he did not help draw up the income tax bill, that he did not vote for it. He does not say he did not vote against it or what his attitude is just at the present time relative to its modification or repeal. All the voters know where Mr. Whitte stands relative to this and other measures and it might be well to place some of the other candidates on record before it is too late. It is vital to the business interests of the state that men of good, sound judgment, of conservative views, be sent to the legislature this year of years to undo, if possible, the mistakes of the reformers of the past sessions who have gone ahead blindly, even outdoing the socialists in their work of reform which thus far has proven to be dangerous to the future prosperity of the state.

POLITICAL IMPOSTURE.

Chairman Stanley of the congressional steel investigation committee has at last made public his report.

"While it is entirely probable that the public will treat the report of the committee of congress appointed to investigate the United States Steel Corporation with indifference or contempt, there are some phases of that precious enterprise which call for outspoken comment. Five reports among eight men scarcely indicates any degree of unanimity in the findings. But Congressman Stanley, chairman of the committee, has, since some time before the conventions met, been giving out forecasts of his report and taking them back again, almost daily, as the front pages of the newspapers were available with the presidential nominations out of the way," says the Wall Street Journal.

"Of all these bills and recommendations, there is not one which bears any demonstrable relation to the evidence collected by the committee. The investigation absolutely failed to find the monopoly sought; there was none of the oppression suspected, because the Steel Corporation, on the testimony of its competitors, was manifestly the best friend they ever had. There was therefore no monopoly; and all the evidence before the committee disclosed was more size, which even in these times is not an indictable offense.

"Such forecasts of the Stanley report as have been made simply expressed what Mr. Stanley had frequently stated, in congress and elsewhere, before he had heard a single word of evidence. He knows well enough that his committee was formed to confirm his previous declarations, and if the evidence failed to do so, so much the worse for the evidence. Mr. Stanley was not even seeking for unpalatable truths. He was after campaign material, such as to him seemed most convenient; and looking all through to self-advertisement, or for anything, in fact, which would perpetuate an accidental notoriety, regardless of the discovery of truth or the dissemination of falsehood.

"This is why each pronouncement by this tribune of the people has been increasingly violent—where his own party leaders have not compelled him to repudiate his more inconvenient utterances. When a politician of this type starts shouting, he startles the public mind at first. But as the public mind grows accustomed to the noise the only thing for him to do is to shout louder. The report of the Stanley committee only means that Mr. Stanley is shouting louder.

"He may desire the bankruptcy of the United States Steel Corporation, at the expense of 150,000 security holders and the enforced idleness of 250,000 employees, without conferring the slightest benefit upon anybody except the foreign competitor. This is merely Mr. Stanley's loudest shout, and after a few lean years the people of the United States will do with him as they have done with others of the kind—unmercifully suppress him, like other public nuisances."

THE LIBERTY BELL.

San Francisco wants the Liberty Bell during the exposition which will celebrate the completion of the Panama Canal. The councils of the city of Philadelphia, the legal guardians of this precious relic and symbol of the beginning of American independence, are hesitating about granting the request. The old crack in the bell has gradually been extending and another has appeared. It is feared that if it is permitted to go from its shrine in Independence Hall upon a long railroad journey it may be seriously damaged.

Yet these objections undoubtedly will be over-ruled. Liberty Bell belongs to the nation, not to Philadelphia. The stars beyond the Mississippi have never seen it. In the journeys it has heretofore taken about the country it has been guarded with the most jealous care. If it goes to San Francisco, any one of a thousand railroad men to whom its safety will be entrusted would gladly risk his life to prevent it from coming to harm.

ON THE SPUR OF THE MOMENT

By ROY K. MOULTON.

Heard on the Kerosene Circuit.

"When I asked my girl to marry me she said she would see me by and by."

"Well, what about it?"

"Well, she has seen me buy and buy ever since."

"I am worried about my husband. He talks in his sleep."

"Well, he has to have a chance to talk sometime, doesn't he?"

"The suffragette's husband is a patient old galoot."

"Who hasn't got a button on his union suit?"

Wizard Burbank is now experimenting on plums. It seems as though to do that job thoroughly, he ought to be in politics.

A Recollection.

How dear to my heart are the scenes of my childhood.

Whom fond recollection predestined them to view.

And one of these memories ever will haunt me:

It is the most painful that I ever knew.

How well I remember that scene in the woodshed,

I ate from the mantle quite often, by jing,

Of all my mother's effects I remember

That old wooden hairbrush that she used to swing.

From the Hickeyville Clarion.

Mr. Emerson Polls is believed to be the 1912 snake champion at the present time.

She was walking along the road near her home one day last week and espied what she thought was a large log lying at the side of the path.

She sat down to rest, being very tired, when the log moved and started to carry her across an open field.

Mrs. Potts found that the log was a blacksnake, one of the largest ever seen in that locality, and she instantly killed it with her hat-pin.

Mrs. Potts is as ardent suffragist. The reptile measured forty-eight feet in length.

Things always happen right for some people.

Mr. Earnest Twigg wanted to marry the beautiful daughter of a nearby farmer.

But the daughter demanded a diamond ring.

Its pilgrimage to the Pacific coast will bring out some of the most impressive demonstrations of American patriotism the country has ever seen.

In the ears of the West its voice has always been clear. But the West is entitled to see the Liberty Bell and draw from it the inspiration with which it thrilled the crowd waiting outside the old state house in Philadelphia on that memorable Fourth of July in 1776.

Kansas farmers are offering to throw in joy rides with high wages in order to get harvest hands.

Evidently they consider a farm hand with a broken shoulder blade better than none.

That noise is caused by old Dick Deadeye moaning and turning over in Davy Jones' locker.

It has been decreed that the bluejackets in the navy shall wear pajamas.

Finally there is a gleam of hope for weary Wisconsin.

A Wisconsin woman has sued for divorce because her husband does nothing but talk politics.

A New York man has invented a machine whereby one can ascertain whether he is in love.

Still, most of the young fellows will leave that to the girl.

President Madero reports peace in Mexico.

However, this report may be like others that have come out of Mexico—somewhat exaggerated.

It is said that $5,000,000 a year is spent for golf balls.

Indoubtedly those in charge of the highball record will immediately get busy.

Hams one hundred years old have been found in Germany.

But there are some on the American stage apparently older than that.

There is one satisfaction—the members of Congress are suffering even more than the rest of the country.

A Useful Remedy.

Little Jamie, aged three, was playing with his little friend, Jack.

At the time Jamie chanced to have a rather heavy cold and was sneezing quite often.

Jack's mother heard him several times and sympathetically asked: "Why, Jamie, what a cold you have!"

Doesn't your mother give you anything for it?" "Yes, ma'am," Jamie very respectfully answered.

"She gives me a clean handkerchief," whereupon he produced the prescribed "remedy."

—Delineator.

And would not become engaged with-out it.

Mr. Twigg was disconsolate and decided to walk down to the river, jump in and end it all.

As he was about to do so he noticed a beautiful pickerel disporting itself near the surface of the water.

Something told Mr. Twigg to grab the pickerel, and by a deft movement he did so.

Upon cutting the fish open he found a beautiful diamond ring.

It just happened to fit the left third finger of the girl he loved, and now wedding bells are heard in the distance.

As R. Le Gallienne Would Write It.

Upon each and every occasion when I bid myself to the metropolis,

The gentlemen whom I find there persist in chastising, with their pedal extremities, my faithful domestic quadruped.

But I inform you it can not, by any possibility, make an infinitesimal differentiation, if he is, perchance, only a hound.

The gentlemen whom I happen upon in the metropolis must discontinue, chastising, with their pedal extremities, my faithful domestic quadruped.

And They Get Good Money For It.

Making a sort of a noise in vaudeville which may or may not sound something like an Elsie Janis imitation of Eva Tanguay.

Making after-dinner speeches clipped from Joe Miller's joke book.

Writing musical comedies which contain no music and less comedy.

Inventing complexionations which tear the complexion off the face.

The Whist Club.

There can not be much fun in it. They just sit there and scowl.

When some one trumpets her partner's ace there is an awful howl.

They sit and nag and scold and scarp o'er every card that's played.

And criticize each other's clothes, also the way they're made.

They sit and play four hours or more, to love shows in their eyes.

They're fighting for a decent dish, for this is the big first prize.

Each one slams down her card quite enough to break her wrist.

There's no love lost, I'll tell you that, when women folks play whist.

There's something doing when the boy comes home.

It gets so quiet in the house when the children are all gone.

After thirty years of living together father and mother are where they were when they began together—just the two of them.

About once a month the boy comes home.

He slams the door, drops his grip, grabs the little mother and shouts.

"Hello, dad!" which makes quite a difference—when the boy comes home.

There's a lot to tell.

Mostly the boy talks to his mother—talks about everything and sometimes about the best girl he wants to marry some fine future day—and he talks to father mostly about business—when the boy comes home.

He is a big boy now.

He throws his hat into a corner and scatters the newspapers over the floor just as he did when he was a knee breeched kid.

And mother doesn't scold quite so strongly as she used to—when the boy comes home.

The boy comes Saturday evening and stays over Sunday.

And the Sunday dinner! The kind that mother makes of fried chicken, with plenty of gravy and the fixin's the boy likes best, is the kind that mother likes to make.

And father piles the plate plumb full and then some—when the boy comes home.

When the boy goes away?

Why, mother sets the old alarm clock Sunday night two hours ahead of the boy's Monday morning train.

And the two of them slip quietly down, mother to the kitchen and father to stir up the fire and set the table and carry in the grub, and—

They let the boy sleep till the very last minute.

And then father shouts up the stairway, "Yolo, breakfast's ready!"

And mother hustles to get some red apples into the boy's valise.

And as she pours the coffee she reminds the boy again about that heavy underwear should the weather turn colder, and—

But that's another story.

There's something doing when the boy comes home—and then it's mighty quiet.

When the boy comes home.

A Hungarian Pompell.

A dispatch from Budapest announces that a Hungarian archaeologist, M. Duday, in certain excavations which he was superintending near Zsibo, in Transylvania, has discovered the site of the ancient Roman city of Porolissum, and is enabled to reconstruct the town. The houses have resisted the ravages of time, being substantially built of brick and adjoining one another. The rooms are very small, but regular in form. M. Duday has also come upon the ancient theater, of great dimensions, which should give some idea of the size of the town. The archaeologist considers that Porolissum had a population of 30,000.

PROGRAM FOR CLOSE OF SUMMER SESSION

Exercises This Afternoon End Six Weeks' Session at High School Building.

Special exercises at the high school main room this afternoon marked the close of the six weeks' summer session of the Rock County Teachers' Training school. Examinations which were begun yesterday, will probably be finished tomorrow, but the program today formally closed the summer school. Following is the program:

Songs by the students: "The Mother's Lullaby," "Bringing the Cattle Home," "The Battle of the Wind and Leaves," and "On Wisconsin."
"The Value of the Summer Session": to first grade people, Carrie
Nelson; second grade people, Esther
Nordrum; third grade people, Beryl Ahara.

Remarks by Supt. O. D. Antisdel.
Solos by Prof. Emil Roethe, "Cherries Ripe," "They Had Nothing to Do
But Chat."
Address: "The Country School Situation," Charles E. Moore, president of the training school board.
Piano solo, Miss Bessie Buell.

WILL TRY SWEEPING PAVEMENT BY HAND

Method Will Be Given Thorough Test
by City Council—May Have to Increase Size of Force.

Sweeping streets by hand brooms will be given a thorough test by the city council before it is decided to buy a new mechanical sweeper. The council will take notes both as to efficiency and to expense, and the trial will be of sufficient duration to make the observations taken and the data accumulated of value for comparison with other methods. Superintendent of Streets C. K. Miltimore will re-organize the force, assigning to each man a district for whose cleanliness he will be held responsible. They will not be required to work any specified length of time, but they must have the work done by the time the collecting wagon comes around. They can begin work as early in the morning as they desire.
Four men are now employed as sweepers, but two more will probably be added to the force. The paving of North Main street from Milwaukee street to Fourth avenue, has added four more blocks to the streets that must be regularly swept. The oiling of the macadam streets has prevented washouts and made it easier to keep the brick streets clean and free from dust.

SATURDAY LAST DAY FOR FILING PAPERS

Nomination Papers for Candidates for Office at September Primary
Must Be Ready Tomorrow.

All nomination papers for candidates seeking nomination for county offices on any ticket at the September primary, must be filed at the office of the county clerk tomorrow according to the terms of the law. The majority of aspirants for offices have already filed the requisite number of signatures but there are several who have delayed until the last day.

LARGE IMPORTATION OF TEA ARRIVES IN CITY

Carload of High Grade Japan Tea
Imported by the Janesville Wholesale Grocery Co.

From far away Shimidzu, in the heart of the tea growing district of Japan, approximately 30,000 pounds of the best tea grown in that country arrived in Janesville this morning. The tea is the famous Rex Chop brand, the distribution of which is controlled exclusively in this territory by the Janesville Wholesale Grocery Co.
About five years ago this company imported 25 chests of this tea, averaging 80 pounds to the chest, as an experiment. The tea grew in a preferred soil and is now brought here direct in carload lots. The freight on a shipment of this kind averages about $540. The tremendous increase in the consumption of Rex Chop speaks very highly for its quality.

SUFFRAGISTS GAVE INTERESTING FARCE

Miss La Follette Also Gave Strong Address at Gathering of Evansville Suffragist Forces.

(SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.)

Evansville, Aug. 2.—The short farce presented by the Political Equality League at the hall last evening was much enjoyed by the audience and was calculated to prove that it would not only be more agreeable but also cheaper in the long run for man to allow woman to vote than to support all his female relations himself.

Fola La Follette's lecture given after the play, was heard with much interest by an appreciative audience, and was very favorably accepted. Miss La Follette is a forcible and convincing speaker and is thoroughly informed on the equal suffrage question. She has its most telling points at her tongue's end, and her lecture was instructive and also illustrative of many points in favor of equal suffrage that do not present themselves to the average person, who has not given much serious thought to the subject. The lecture was provocative of a desire for more information and a better understanding of the question of equal suffrage.

HAVE BUSY MORNING IN MUNICIPAL COURT

Seven Arraigned for Intoxication in Addition to Shearers and His Companions.

With seven drunks to be disposed of in addition to Shearers and his three companions, the municipal court this morning had the largest amount of cases for one session that it had had in a long time. Two of the seven, "Ted" Kyring and Walter Smith, paid their fines, respectively $2 and $2 and each Julius Seifeld, who told Judge Field that he was working on the construction of the new condenser at Footville, was dismissed on his promise to leave town in half an hour. John Cleary entered a plea of "not guilty" and his trial was set for 3:30 o'clock this afternoon. He admitted that he had been drinking some and said the officer told him to "beat it" out of town. Did he suppose I could beat the train, said Cleary.

The other who were sentenced and their terms were: John Johnson, six days; John Dorsey, six days; and Nels Olson, five days.

WANT WARM WEATHER FOR TOBACCO CROP

Heavy Rainfall During Week Has Prevented Cultivation and Growth is Slightly Retarded.

Heavy rainfall and lack of warm weather during the past week have not been any too favorable for the growing tobacco crop. Cultivation has been suspended of necessity and warm weather is badly needed to make the crop grow as it should at this time of the year. This is especially true of the late field, but even the earlier crops need better growing weather. Topping has begun in a few fields but the crop is rather uneven and small. The Edgerton Reporter, in its issue today, gives some timely advice on the matter of topping, which will be of interest to growers:

"Topping should commence as soon as the buds show well above the surrounding leaves, and if the tobacco is quite late the plant should be topped as soon as the buds can be gotten hold of. There are several advantages in early topping. First, the plant at the time when the bud appears is growing rapidly and if topped at this time will continue to grow, causing the most complete development of the upper leaves, a most desirable result to accomplish. Second, several days' time is saved in the time required to mature the plant. Third, the large amount of substance which goes into the flowering top and top leaves in late topping is diverted to the other leaves by topping earlier. Fourth, in early topping the plants are far less liable to develop suckers. Fifth, by breaking off the top when small the height of the plant is kept down, thereby lessening the liability of being blown flat by heavy winds. In animal and plant life maturity is effected before reproduction commences, hence the conclusion that with the tobacco plant in blossom the leaves have almost entirely ceased to grow, and nature's supreme object being reproduction, she exerts herself to accomplish her ends by producing suckers upon which to grow the seed after the top of the plant has been broken off, so that little change is made in the leaves except the ripening process. Nothing is gained by topping late and much is lost by neglect in this matter."

BANCROFT ATTACKS PRESENT POLITICAL LINE-UP IN STATE

Attorney General Explains Why He is Not a Candidate for Re-election—Not Progressive Enough.

[SPECIAL TO THE GAZETTE.]

Madison, Wis., Aug. 2.—Attorney General Levi H. Bancroft issued a statement today explaining his position in relation to the present state administration and giving as his reason for not seeking re-election the fact that he is not progressive enough and is out of sympathy with the socialistic platform of the McGovern forces. His statement is a scathing one. It is given below in full:

"In justice to my many friends and loyal supporters, to whose loyalty and unselfish efforts in my behalf I am indebted for my election to the office of attorney general, I feel in duty bound to make some statement of my present position.

If I had entertained any intention of again becoming a candidate for the office of attorney general, it would have been necessary for me to have been nominated by the legislature some time ago. The fact that I have not done so would indicate that I had no such intention, and in reply to the many inquiries now being made concerning my candidacy I can only say that I am not a candidate for re-nomination.

Opposition an Affront.
My determination not to become a candidate is based solely upon present political conditions. I came into this office under circumstances which would have rendered an endorsement particularly gratifying, and I feel that my administration in this office has merited the approbation of the people. That the department of the attorney general has been properly administered during my incumbency I think no one will deny. The record speaks for itself. Not a single criticism of the department has been heard during my term of office. In addition to an unsurpassed record in the courts, my department has collected a revenue of upwards of two million dollars from inheritance taxes and the settlement of pending litigation. Under any ordinary circumstances I would have had no opposition at the primaries. It is a time-honored precedent of all political parties with the single exception of the so-called "Wisconsin Progressives" that a public official who has served one term and who has discharged the duties of the office in a commendable and satisfactory manner will be accorded a re-nomination not only as a matter of courtesy, but as a matter of common decency.

"If there existed in Wisconsin a dominant political party worthy of the name, the record of service rendered by this department would entitle the incumbent to a re-nomination without opposition.

Not Progressive Enough.
The so-called "Progressive" party as now constituted, having no object or purpose in the economy of human affairs except the paradoxical one of the creation and exaltation of office, constitutes an exception to the general rule. Not being in favor of abolishing the constitution, the recall of judges, the multiplication of commissions, the present unprecedented extravagance in state expenditures, the levying of income taxes, the destruction of the Republican party, and various other similar "Bull Moose" performances, I am not considered sufficiently "progressive" to warrant my retention in office, and the attorney generalship is wanted for one of the elect. The young man who was appointed by Governor McGovern as claim agent, immediately upon taking the oath of office filed a claim for the position of attorney general, and in part by virtue of his position has conducted a continuous campaign as the administration candidate. Senator Owen also began his campaign for my present position immediately upon my election.

Supporting the candidacy of these two aspirants for the attorney generalship are the organized forces of the political faction now in control of Wisconsin politics. I feel no disposition to inject myself into another bitter contest for this office under present conditions. If I have merited an endorsement it should have been accorded to me without opposition as in the case of other state officials. If I have not merited an endorsement, it would be all together unbecoming to me to embark upon a political campaign for the purpose of forcing my candidacy upon the people.

"Progressive Socialists."
"If there were no other considerations to deter me from entering such a contest, my own self-respect and my own political convictions would be sufficient to deter me from such a contest. I am a Republican, and as such I could not subscribe to the platform of repudiation, hypocrisy, and demagoguery which will be framed by the 'Progressive Socialists' at the coming so-called Republican platform convention of 1912. I could not accept a nomination upon such a platform without prostituting my own intelligence and betraying every sense of honor and allegiance as a Republican, and surrendering every sense of patriotism and loyalty as an American citizen in honor bound to uphold the institutions of the country. The integrity of the courts, and the departments of constitutional government.

Further, it is idle to talk about my going out single-handed on a genuine Republican platform for the office of attorney general to contest a nomination or election in control of Wisconsin politics. As a candidate for attorney general I could raise no issues, as this is only an administrative office. This department has nothing to do with the making of laws, but is concerned only in their enforcement whether they be good or bad.

"The successful politician of today is not the man who attends to the duties of his position for the purpose of rendering efficient public service, but the fellow who uses his office as a means of furthering his own political ambitions; who maintains and manipulates a personal press bureau, and who publishes his autobiography in magazines and political pamphlets, making appeal to his imagination for his facts and to his memory for his rhetoric, modestly proclaiming from the house-tops that his love and confidence in the dear people is only exceeded by his own virtue and ability. I make no pretensions to membership in this class, and I shall cheerfully resign my place at the public crib to that persistent and perspiring patriot who, in the political marathon, can beat all the others to it.

Debt of Conservatism.
"Speaking seriously, it seems to me that we are drifting into a state of political chaos fraught with danger to Republican institutions.

"I am a believer in political parties. I consider them necessary and essential to free government. Parties acting through their representatives may be committed to certain principles and measures necessary to the public weal, and through the medium of party organization and party fealty these principles may receive the sanction of the majority and be made effective. The process of welding public sentiment into an organized force which can be utilized for the general welfare through the medium of personal politics or individualism is too slow and cumbersome a process to be productive of good results and such efforts always degenerate into a mere personal rivalry and race for office. The most effective means yet devised for securing the blessings of good government is through the medium of a political party loyally and faithfully supported. No human government can be perfect. There will always be room for honest criticism and improvement. But if it occasionally becomes desirable to clear the house, it is not necessary to tear down and demolish the entire structure. Demagogues may declaim and a partisan press may inveigh for political effect, but the great invincible fact remains that this nation of ours has enjoyed a half century of prosperity and peace without a parallel in human history, which had its origin in the patriotism and fealty of that generation of men who founded the Republican party, which for fifty years has fostered and upheld the principles of constitutional liberty. During all that period and to the present moment it is only the organized forces in both the Republican and Democratic parties, the forces which are typified in the character of such men as Grover Cleveland and William H. Taft, the forces which stand for the integrity of the constitution and the courts, who have faith in the constitution and confidence in the courts, which have stood as a barrier between constitutional government and political anarchy. In the presence of a political propaganda instituted for the purpose of destroying the Republican party and substituting a socialistic democracy in place of the American people have enjoyed so many of the blessings of liberty and justice conservatism should not be considered a term of reproach. Labor is employed almost upon its own terms. The farmer was never more prosperous and the industrial and business world should pause to consider possible consequences and recall the industrial disasters of the past before proceeding further in the revolutionary propaganda which has for its object the destruction of Republican institutions.

"In brief my determination not to enter into this contest has been largely actuated by honest political convictions which I am unwilling to barter for place or opportunity."

THE SEWING MACHINE.

(By Howard L. Ramm.)

The sewing machine which is used to keep woman in a contented frame of mind and prevent her from becoming a butterfly of fashion. After a high-spirited wife has played on the pedals of a sewing machine for ten hours, she will not be inclined to count the pulsing accents of the cuckoo clock as her husband ascends the stairs in his stocking feet and a state of trepidation.

The sewing machine was invented in 1845 by the late Elias Howe, a Massachusetts Yankee who had grown tired of holding his suspenders in place with ten-penny nails. His first machine was a crude affair, having a very short wheelbase, and doing most of its stitching on the hop, step and jump principle, which caused its output to look like a hem-stitching in a gummy sack. It took Mr. Howe several years to perfect a machine which could be used without introducing leg cramps into the family circle.

If Mr. Howe could come back to earth now, he would not recognize his child. The modern sewing machine will do everything except sweep under the beds and keep ants out of the refrigerator. Some women make clothes on it which fit just as well as if they had been ordered from a house-wrecking concern.

The latest style machines are run by electric motor, with self-starter and automatic cut off. A woman can feed a bolt of blue denim into one of these machines, and it will emerge at the other end in serried ranks of form-fitting overalls, while she is peeling the potatoes or swaying in rhythmic cadence with the family wash.

The sewing machine runs neck and neck with the carpet sweeper as a pleasing and appropriate birthday present, as it reminds a wife that woman's work is never done, if she lives to be 30,000 years old.

God Demands Recognition

By Rev. J. H. Ralston,

Secretary of Correspondence Department of Moody Bible Institute, Chicago

TEXT—Psalm 46:10—"Be still, and know that I am God."

While we rarely find a professed deist nowadays, few men recognize

God as he manifests himself. Yet, while men do not recognize God who has revealed himself, they are constantly manufacturing gods to suit themselves, and these are as numerous as those of Egypt in the days of the Pharaohs.

In the text there is the call of God to give attention to himself—

"Be still, and know that I am God." God is intensely interested that man should recognize him, not only because man would thus greatly bless himself, but God demands this recognition because he is sensitive to the appreciation of those whom he has created in his own likeness and image. We must maintain this, notwithstanding the specious plea that it would be ignoble in God to demand such recognition.

This matter can only be settled by an appeal to authority, and multitudes believe that the Bible is such authority. In Exodus 34:14, we read: "Thou shalt worship no other God, for the Lord whose name is jealous, is a jealous God." Joshua called the attention of Israel to the same characteristic in God when he wished Israel to return to God, to the enjoyment of their divine heritage.

In the text God does not ask man to know him; he simply asks that we recognize him as God, and appeals in the 8th and 9th verses of this chapter for the use of the physical senses: "Come, behold the works of the Lord, what desolation he has wrought in the earth; he maketh wars to cease unto the end of the earth, he breaketh the bow and cutteth the spear in sunder; he burneth the chariot in the fire." Our attention is also called to what we have heard with our ears, and our fathers have told us what he has done in the time of old. Were not God's dealings with the Egyptians to prove that he was God? Was not God back of the blessing of Israel by Balaam, while Balaam's purpose was to curse? Has God not set up one and put down another? Has he not despoiled the devices of the crafty that their hands cannot perform their enterprise, and has he not taken the wise in their own craftiness, and is not the counsel of the froward carried headlong? And what shall be said of the occurrences of modern history? Had God anything to do with the earthquake in San Francisco; the burning of the General Schofield; and the sinking of the Titanic? Of the latter event it is said that in the last moments of that fated vessel's remaining afloat, all classes of people prayed, and the band played until the very end, "Nearer, My God, to Thee." And what was this but recognition of God, and possibly with many, too late?

To say that God has nothing to do with these things on the ground of that it would be violence to the reign of law, dishonoring to him as an infinite being, and entirely relieve man of moral responsibility, is really not worthy of serious consideration. The consciousness of God's immanence in all such things would be a deterrent from sin on the part of some, and would be an incentive to good on the part of others.

How are men to know God? Simply by being still. By searching, men cannot find out God. As David would lie in the fields at night and look up into the starry heavens, it would not be for the purpose of finding out God, but as he gazed he could not help but exclaim: "When I consider the heavens, the work of thy fingers, the moon and the stars, which thou hast created, what is man that thou art mindful of him, or the son of man that thou visitest him?" As Moses would have Israel to recognize God, he said: "Stand still, and see the salvation of God." As Isaiah would have Israel see wherein their strength lay, he said they should sit still. So the method of knowing God is to just keep the eyes and ears open, to stop, look, listen—God is here, there, everywhere. The results of this will be a more serious consideration of one's obligation to God. The life of the Christian will be made richer, and as the darkness of the hereafter is approached, there will be a preparation to meet God, with whom, whether he will or will not, man has much to do. To know God, and him whom he has sent, is everlasting life.

When the dust of business so fills your room that it threatens to choke you, sprinkle it with the water of prayer, and then you can clean it out with comfort and expedition.—James Stalker.

Only in a world where there is suffering could God prove that he is love.

The man who buries his talent might as well bury himself.

Trustless.
"Folks dat trusts in love at first sight," said Uncle Eben, "is terrible apt to finish by not bein' able to see each other wif a spy glass."

Mayor Gaynor, his wife (in chair) and daughters Ruth (on the left), and Helen.

DEVELOPMENTS IN THE ROSENTHAL MURDER CASE MAY UNDO REPUTATION OF NEW YORK'S MAYOR; HE STOOD BY BECKER.

New York, Aug. 2.—The Rosenthal murder case promises to undo the reputation of a number of men who have hitherto been prominent in the political life of New York City. Among them is Mayor of New York City, John F. Gaynor, as mayor of New York City, is charged with the duty of executing the laws. He has not only failed to execute them in many instances, but during his administration conditions have grown so bad in the police department that the very instrument whose purpose it is to combat crime has openly encouraged it. The police killed Herman Rosenthal.

When the net began to draw about Police Commissioner Charles Becker, and there was an insistent demand for his suspension from the police force, Mayor Gaynor refused to permit it. He wrote a letter to Becker, scolding him for once having dined with Rosenthal. He had no further censure to offer.

Never has the mayor betrayed the slightest appreciation—so it is freely charged—of the real issue in this case—the overwhelming evidence of a powerful coalition between the police corruption and organized crime.

The recently expressed opinion of William F. Baker, police commissioner in the closing months of Mayor McClellan's term and the opening months of Mayor Gaynor's session, are the views held by thousands in New York.

"I have been waiting for this for two years," said Mr. Baker. "Under the circumstances it was the only result of the 'personal liberty' policy to expect. While that policy is in force you should not expect the members of the police department to be efficient.

"No matter what may be said, gambling in this city can be stopped. And when you stop gambling you can stop big graft in the police department. It was done when McClellan was mayor. During the last of the latter's term this town was tight. Hard work brought this condition about."

Baker declared that Mayor Gaynor invited the crooks to come to New York when he "marched into the city hall, megaphoned his doctrine of personal liberty and outward decency, ordered the policemen not to use force in getting evidence, forbade the carrying of nightsticks and blasted the plain clothes men out of existence."

FAMOUS
AMERICAN INDIANS
ALBERT PAYSON TERMEHUE

QUANAH.

A twelve-year-old Indian boy, Quanah by name, was left an orphan and a pauper in a Comanche Indian tribe on the Canadian river. His father, Chief Petacoma, had been killed in battle with the government troops on December 18, 1860. In the same fight his mother (said to have been originally a captive frontier girl named Cynthia Parker) was captured. Their friends were slain or imprisoned. The boy was thus left at twelve utterly alone in the world, without family, without a penny's worth of property, without prospects. It was a start in life hopeless enough to crush many spirits. But Quanah was the sort of man to overcome obstacles, not by smashing through them, but by crawling around them.

A Comanche's Love Affair.

He made friends with other camp boys, whom he induced to share their food with him and to give him their castoff blankets. Little by little he managed to gain a strong influence over these lads, until, poor as he was, they recognized him as their leader. Then, in early manhood, he fell in love with Weckeah, daughter of his tribal chief, Yellow Bear. The girl readily returned the tall, handsome pauper's affection. But among Indians matrimony is also a matter of money. A penniless lover cannot hope to wed the daughter of a chief. For chiefs' daughters are worth many ponies or blankets or firearms to their fathers.

For a time the young Comanche's secret love affair drifted along tamely enough. Then came Ekitokup, a wealthy chief, who offered Yellow Bear ten ponies for Weckeah's hand in marriage to one of his sons. While Yellow Bear was debating the offer Quanah heard of it. He had but one scrappy pony to his name. But he hurried to all his friends and managed to borrow nine more. He hastened in triumph with these to Yellow Bear's tepee, rehearsing his proposal as he went. But on his arrival he found Ekitokup had raised the offer to twenty ponies. And Yellow Bear had accepted.

It was a moment either for despair or for quick action. Quanah chose the latter. He rallied twenty-one of the young men of the tribe who were devoted friends of his. That night, escorted by these twenty-one youths, he and Weckeah eloped. They knew that Comanche law demands a death penalty for such an act, and that Ekitokup would follow hot on their trail to enforce that penalty. So they rode day and night as fast as they could urge their wiry ponies, and did not cease their flight until they were safe in the mountain fastnesses of Scurry County, Tex.

There Quanah and his stolen bride began their wedded life. As they were still penniless, Quanah led his twenty-one young braves upon a series of horse stealing raids into the grass country. So rich did the little band become at this occupation that other Indians joined them. The braves returned by stealth to their old homes and bore to the camp brides of their own. Soon Quanah was chief of a tribe several hundred strong. Ekitokup heard of his whereabouts, but when he found him so powerful the old chief wisely consented to abandon his plan of vengeance in return for the payment of twenty ponies (the original dower price of Weckeah). Quanah readily gave him the ponies, remarking as he did so, "I know a ranch whence I can steal twenty more before tomorrow."

Now that he was no more an outlaw, Quanah returned to the Comanches. He made himself chief of the tribe in whose village house he had lived as a beggar. There, from a stronghold in the Wichita mountains, he reigned over the Indians for miles about and grew daily richer and more powerful. Incidentally, he married four more wives. Seeing the folly of wasting his power in useless warfare, Quanah surrendered to Gen. McKenzie in 1876 and became a powerful citizen of what was later Oklahoma. He persuaded the government to give his tribe good farming lands.

Quanah proudly called himself "the friend of Theodore Roosevelt" (whom he accompanied once on a wolf hunt), and he often went to Washington on diplomatic errands for his people. He once even gravely requested that he be sent to the United States senate when Oklahoma should become a state. To white settlers he called himself by the semi-civilized name of "Quanah Parker." He also desired to be known as "the father of the red man and the brother of the white man." He built a two-story "mansion" for himself and named it "the Comanche White House." Thence he ruled his people wisely and kept them at peace.

Of the horse stealing days which founded his fortune Quanah never cared to talk much. Nor of the love episode that turned him eventually from a beggar into a great chief. Perhaps, now that Weckeah was merely one of his five wives and no longer the beautiful girl for whom he had risked life, this romantic affair seemed to him less noteworthy than of yore.

RECOGNIZE THIS LITTLE MOTHER? YOU
SAW HER IN THE PARK ONLY YESTERDAY

"I'm bringing up the family."

Do you recognize this little mother? She is seen quite often in the city parks with her charges, and the accompanying picture was snapped only yesterday. See how happy she looks. Her two children don't seem to give her the least bit of worry; and she doesn't seem to be giving them any worry, either, for notice their broad smiles.

There happens to be a half dozen children in this family, and the mother is not strong. So Marjorie, one of the older girls, who is seen wheeling the cab, has taken the two younger children under her protecting wing. She says it's great fun to bring up children, especially when they are as good as hers are. Watch for her the next time you take a walk in the park.

Man's Wants.

In a western town recently men waded waist-deep in water to get to a saloon which had been isolated owing to a cloudburst. Have you ever heard of men who were willing to get their feet wet in order to reach a counter at which books on philosophy were being sold at a discount?

To Sterilize Books.

A successful mechanical process for the sterilization of books has been recently devised in France, and a suggestion is being considered providing for the establishment of plants in different parts of the city for the regular treatment of the volumes used in schools.

The Beggars of Madeira.

There is only one fly in the ointment of Madeira comfort—the beggars. They begin to beg before they can walk, and they call, "Penny! penny!" before they can list the sacred name of "mamma." However, one good thing has come of our experience with them. They have prepared us for beggars elsewhere. We are hardened, now—at least, we think we are. The savor of pity has gone out of us. —From "The Ship-Dwellers" by Albert Bigelow Faine, in the Outing Magazine.

Unfortunately Proclaimed.

While on active service a French soldier was informed by the mayor of his village that his father had recently died. In acknowledgment he wrote as follows: "Monsieur le maire, I heartily thank you for my father's death. It is a little accident that often happens in families. As for myself, I am in the hospital minus one leg, with which I have the honor to salute you."

A Lesson from Nature.

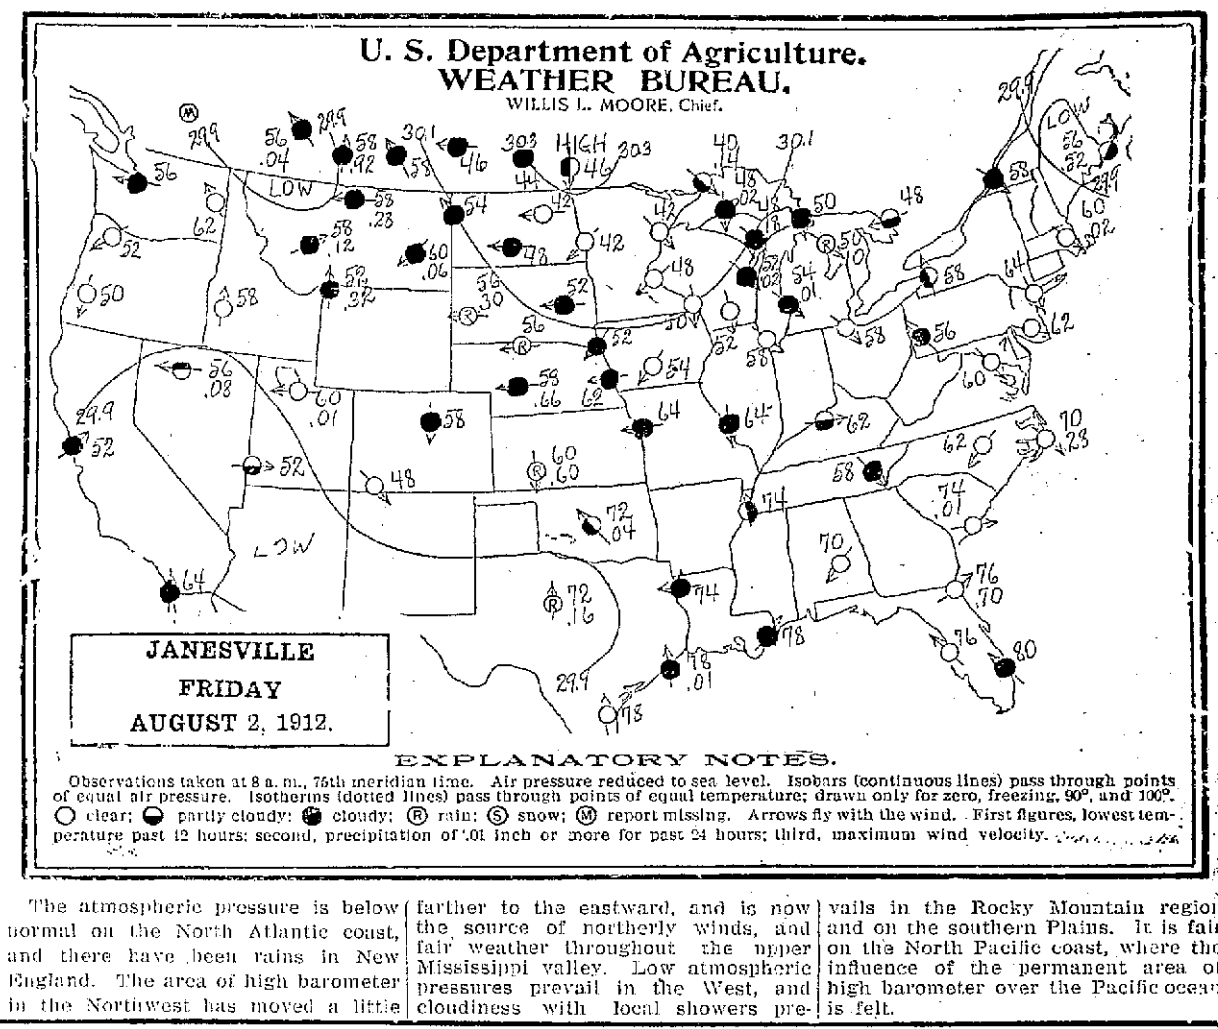

I saw a delicate flower had grown up two feet high, between the horses' path and the wheel track. An inch more to right or left had sealed its fate, or an inch higher; and yet it lived to flourish as much as if it had a thousand acres of untrodden space around it, and never knew the danger it incurred. It did not borrow trouble, nor invite an evil fate by apprehending it.—Henry D. Thoreau (1817-1862).

Another Use for Roentgen Rays.

Roentgen rays are used to examine insulated cables, every air bubble, particle of foreign substance or imperfection casting its shadow on the screen. This is especially useful for ocean cables, where faults would cause serious trouble after laying.

Trees Brought Rain.

In lower Egypt rain fell very seldom. During the French occupation, about 1780, it did not rain for 18 months, but since Mahomet Ali and Ibrahim Pasha completed their vast plantations—the former alone planted more than 20,000,000 olive, fir, cotton, acacia, plane trees, etc.—there now falls a good deal of rain.

The Evening Chit-Chat

BY RUTH CAMERON

THE ANECDOTE BORE.

TO BE able to tell an interesting anecdote in a clever way, or, better still, to know how to make a commonplace happening interesting by one's manner of telling it, is one of the greatest of conversational gifts.

But to crowd one's conversation with anecdotes is as great a conversational mistake—especially when one does not have a knack of telling them.

Anecdotes ought to be the trimming of conversation, not its warp and woof. And just as we like to see a gown garnished and embroidered here and there, but do not like to see it over-ornamented, so we like of the talker whose conversation is all trimming.

Furthermore, there are certain kinds of anecdotes which never ought to be inflicted on a long-suffering public. For instance, there is the narrative whose chief element of interest lies in a knowledge of the people involved; to tell such an anecdote to someone who does not know these people is like taking a stranger to a neighborhood minstrel show or some very amateur theatricals, and expecting him to enjoy himself.

And yet, there are people who think to divert their friends by telling them such anecdotes in which every other word is either the name of some unknown person or an explanation in regard to one.

Similar to these narratives are anecdotes requiring for their comprehension a knowledge of some trade. The newspaper man, for instance, tells a group of his lay friends some story which would be howlingly funny to a group of newspaper men, and then thinks them stupid because they evidently miss all the points. He might just as well have told the story in an unknown language and accused them of lacking a sense of humor for not laughing. Unfamiliar terms and technicalities spoil the best story. Explained, they break the march of the story; unexplained, they make it incomprehensible.

The worse bore of all in the story-telling line is the person who has read an interesting story or attended an absorbing play and tries to tell you about it.

Perhaps one man in ten thousand can give a fairly clear synopsis of a story. And at best it is a rather pale and warmed-over thing to hear the story of a story. But to hear it turned upside-down, distorted, criss-crossed with explanations and re-explanations like an old-fashioned letter, as the average man does it, is—well, it's the kind of thing that makes you retire into the recesses of your own mind, to commune with yourself and come back to the surface only when the flow of language ceases and you know it is time for you to say: "Isn't that interesting?"

As the man or woman who will really listen and try to understand a thing like this is about as rare as the man or woman who can tell it well, on the whole it's better not to attempt it. For that makes nine thousand, nine hundred and ninety-nine chances that you are not the gifted "raconteur" and the same number that he is not the gifted listener. Rather heavy odds, don't you think?

HEART AND HOME TALKS

BY BARBARA BOYD

The Guest Who Doesn't Come

WHEN you lightly accept an invitation and then as lightly fail to put in an appearance at the time appointed, do you ever think of the inconvenience you may be causing your hostess?

A family of five consisting of two well-grown boys, the father, mother and a cousin, sent word to two aunts that they would come and spend Sunday with them. The onslaught of a family of five, three of them of the male persuasion, upon the home of two elderly spinsters meant a well-stocked larder. So the two elderly aunts went to work, as only two devoted aunts living in a country town can. The souls of several chickens passed on to Nirvana, though their bodies remained to grace the Sunday dinner table; the ice cream freezer turned merrily; the odor of cookies and gingerbread rose tantalizingly upon the air.

Then the family didn't come. It rained a trifle in the morning and so they got at the end of the long distance 'phone and said they would come another time.

And the aunts ate chicken for a week and gave ice cream to all the neighbors, and made the small boys of town happy with cookies and gingerbread.

But think of their state of mind!

A minister sent word to a small family that he would be in their town on a certain day and would call in to see them. As he would get there about noon, the hostess set to work making preparations fit for the minister's visit. Means were none too plentiful in that home, but the minister's visit was a rare treat and nothing was too good for him. So she bought the delicacies of the season, polished her few pieces of silver, put on her finest table cloth, dressed the children in their best.

And then he didn't come.

He was detained and sent word he would come some other time.

Many of us have gone through such experiences. But have any of us been the perpetrators? That is the question for us to consider. Whether we have been the victim or not, the chief thing to think upon is have we ever put any of our friends to such inconvenience, possibly to an expense they could ill afford. For it is out of the goodness of their hearts that our friends jump in and do this for us. They want to give us the very best they can. And it certainly shows inconsideration, if nothing worse, to disappoint them for some trifling reason.

Sometimes a guest's failure to appear makes little difference. But if we are the guest and know our coming will make some change in the household routine of our hostess, no matter how little it may be, let us not accept an invitation unless we are reasonably sure we can keep our appointment. And it is a good time to bear this in mind just now, for this is the season of entertaining.

Barbara Boyd.

HOUSEHOLD TALKS

Henrietta D. Grauel

A choice loin a fancy price is charged for it as the value of the remainder of the loin is lessened by its removal. In some markets the ends of the sirloin and T-bone steaks are cut off and sold separately; the flavor of these cuts is as good as any part of the animal but the meat is coarser.

Round and rump steaks are economical because they have but one bone in them; they can be made tender by mangling, but after steaks are mangled they must be cooked on a very hot broiler or they lose their juices.

Flank steaks are much sought after; they require to be scored and then mangled before they are cooked. There are but two flank steaks in a beef and their flavor is excellent.

Chuck and rib steaks from young animals are good portions but if the meat is coarse and tough it should be bought for pot roasts and for boiling; good pot roasts and boiling pieces are also found in the brisket, on the neck and on the lower part of the body, called the "plate."

Beef hearts roasted make a savory low priced meat dish; select two or three small rather than one big heart. Have the butcher trim it, removing the ventricles and lining.

Wash the hearts and season inside with salt and pepper. Stuff with bread dressing or take three boiled potatoes and two minced onions; mash the potatoes, mix in the onions, add butter and more seasoning and use this for a filling. Bake in a covered roasting pan or in a casserole, for an hour or an hour and a half, according to size of hearts.

Roasted liver is too rich a meat to have often, but nicely prepared it is a favorite now and again. If beef liver is used it should be soaked in salted water before it is stuffed with chopped bacon and savory crumbs, mixed with an egg to bind the dressing together. After this mixture is pressed into the pocket sew the opening shut and lard the liver across the top with a few stripes of bacon. Bake and serve with gravy made from the dripping. Serve boiled, creamed rice with this dish.

Pot roasts are sometimes called "venison roasts." A chunky piece of lean meat with brisket on one side is best for this. Brisket the meat in drippings or hot suet on all sides, in the iron pot it is to be cooked in; when it is seared so the juices will be retained while it is cooking, almost cover with boiling water. A three-pound piece should simmer about forty minutes, when the liquid will be reduced; now put in whatever vegetables you like cooked with beef; potatoes should be added a little later. A few minced chile peppers are liked by some, while others think that carrots and onions give the proper taste.

Cover the kettle closely after the vegetables are added and continue cooking slowly until the meat is so tender its falls apart and the vegetables are well braised and tender.

Mutton may be prepared in the same way; turnips are added to it or that little appreciated vegetable, kohlrabi.

The KITCHEN CABINET

THE pleasures of the table may be enjoyed every day, in every climate, at all ages, and by all conditions of men.

SOME FOOD FOR THE SICK.

Set a dish of milk away until it is thick and smooth as jelly, then put it on ice for an hour and serve in glass dishes with cream, sugar and grated nutmeg.

Tomato Cream.—Take a quart of cold milk that has been scalded, add four eggs well beaten and a cupful of tomatoes passed through a sieve, with sugar added to taste. Cook in a hot oven in custard cups surrounded with water.

Sago Jelly.—Take half a cup of the juice of raspberries or strawberries, three-quarters of a cup of sago that has been washed and a cup of sugar; boil all together until the sago is soft, pour into a mold and set on ice to cool.

Banana Cream.—Take the skins from six bananas and cut them up into a saucepan with half an ounce of gelatine that has been dissolved in a cup of water; add the juice and peel of a lemon, and sugar to taste. Cook gently for ten minutes, then pour into it a cup of cream; beat all together and set in a mold to cool.

Green Pea Soup.—Take a third of a cup of freshly cooked green peas, one quarter of a cup of cold water, a quarter of a tablespoonful of butter and three-quarters of a tablespoonful of flour, two-thirds of a cup of scalded milk, a little salt and white pepper. Add water to the peas and let them simmer ten minutes. Rub through a sieve and thicken with the butter and flour cooked together; add milk and seasonings. Strain into a hot cup. Serve with squares of toast.

Creamed Fish.—Prepare a white sauce of a teaspoonful of butter and one of flour cooked together; add a quarter of a cup of milk. Season with a few drops of cold flaked fish freed from bones and skin; add the fish to the sauce. Serve in a large, stuffed potato, which has been cut open, the contents mashed, seasoned and returned to the shell; leave a depression to hold the creamed fish. Garnish with parsley and serve piping hot.

Scrape the meat from a slice of round steak with a spoon, leaving all the stringy portion; season with salt and cook in a hot pan in butter. Make in balls before cooking, and lay three on a slice of buttered toast; garnish with parsley.

IF THIS IS YOUR BIRTHDAY

You will need your best judgment to know how to proceed during the next year. Your greatest danger is in allowing foolish obstinacy to darken your prospects. Remember that intuition is valuable but not infallible. It is to your interest to be respectful to those above you.

Those born today will have good judgment in planning things and will take interest in that kind of work but will be averse to bodily exercise. They must work hard to keep down their rather too impetuous nature.

A WOMAN'S OBSERVATIONS

Edna K. Woolley

"We are happy now," he went on, "and contented with each other. She doesn't expect the impossible of me, and I don't expect the impossible of her. She makes me happy just as she is, and if she got mixed up with these gossiping neighbors she might end up like my first wife."

"My first wife and I were happy at first—as long as the neighbors let us attend to our own business."

"But they began calling and getting well acquainted. Then they began asking my wife if I didn't do this for her, and why I didn't do that."

"And what did I do when I went down town, and didn't I tell her everything I did anyway?"

"Then they'd tell her how good their husbands were to them, and string on to those poor men all the virtues of an angel (though I knew these men pretty well myself). In comparison I was black as the devil."

"Well, I began to hear of it from my wife."

"Now, no man likes to have another man hold up to him for a pattern. I guess maybe I was mean about it. Who wouldn't be? Then she got suspicious and I got meaner. And first thing I knew we were at dagger ends and she was threatening divorce. I told her to go ahead."

"She did, and she got one on the grounds neighbors wagged their heads knowingly."

"It pretty near broke my heart. I guess she felt the same way about it, too, for she died soon after."

"So I'm not going to let my neighbors interfere this time, if I know it. Maybe they'll say I keep my wife shut up like a prisoner. Well, let 'em talk, as long as they don't talk to her. They can talk about me all they like among themselves."

"We're happy as we are, and please the Lord we'll stay happy in our own little way."

"I don't want my new wife to get acquainted with the neighbors," said a middle-aged man who married again a short while ago.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—Please tell me how to furnish my daughter's bedroom so it will look cool and delicate for the summer. She is very fond of pink in the room somewhere. Please tell me soon, as I want the room to surprise her when she gets home in August.

MOTHER.

I wish you had told me what kind of furniture you have in the room. If you are getting new furniture, try to get some white enameled kind, which is always suitable and pretty for a girl's room. If you cannot get that, have some very light wood.

If the room is already furnished with a dark wood, have the draperies and rugs as light as possible.

With white furniture, get lawn with pink flowers on a white background. You can get this in the dressgoods section of a store cheaper than in the upholstery department. Make curtains of this for the windows, finishing edges of curtains with ruffles of the same goods, or coarse white lace. Also make draperies for the dresser and commode (if you have one) or table to match the curtains.

Now make a spread for the bed, with a flat center and ruffles for sides and foot of bed. Pillow shams to match. You might also make a pretty white cushion of the same goods, for one of the chairs.

Have rag rugs, with some pink in for the floor.

If the furniture of the room is dark, have the curtains and draperies white with pink edging, or tie them back with wide pink ribbon.

If you are going to have the room re-papered, get white paper with a wide satin stripe, or with vines of delicate pink flowers, and a border containing pink flowers.

With a little thought and trouble you can develop a room that will be a veritable delight to your daughter.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I have two daughters who are getting old enough to have beaux, but my husband is opposed to their having gentlemen callers. He seems to think they are never growing up, and if their young men friends call he makes it so unpleasant that they don't want to come again.

I don't think this quite fair to the girls, do you? Can you tell me of any way that I can help the girls? I don't want to send them to other people's houses to meet young men and I feel it is their right to entertain them in our home.

PERPLEXED.

Have you talked the matter over carefully and calmly with your husband? It seems strange that a man will be so unreasonable. Does he want to send his daughters out to be courted on street corners and in picture shows? Or does he expect them to remain unmarried all their lives?

If your husband absolutely will not permit the girls to have callers at home, and if your influence with him cannot accomplish anything in that direction, about the only thing you can do is to chaperon your daughters to the houses of friends where they will meet congenial company.

Encourage your daughters, by a sympathetic understanding, to tell you all about the young men they know, and when they are invited to places of entertainment by any of these young men, permit them to go if you know the young men are of good character.

A man who really likes a girl will find a way of courting her even if he cannot call at her own home.

Also, a girl will find a way of having beaux even though her father is opposed to it, and because of such opposition she may take up with entirely the wrong kind of man unless her mother is very wise and sympathetic and helpful.

dark, have the curtains and draperies white with pink edging, or tie them back with wide pink ribbon.

If you are going to have the room re-papered, get white paper with a wide satin stripe, or with vines of delicate pink flowers, and a border containing pink flowers.

With a little thought and trouble you can develop a room that will be a veritable delight to your daughter.

Dear Mrs. Thompson—I have two daughters who are getting old enough to have beaux, but my husband is opposed to their having gentlemen callers. He seems to think they are never growing up, and if their young men friends call he makes it so unpleasant that they don't want to come again.

THIRTY-NINE YEARS MISSIONARY IN SIAM

Mrs. Helen Chandler, Whose Funeral Was Held in Afton Yesterday Died At Age Of Ninety-Two

Afton, Aug. 1.—The funeral of Mrs. Helen Chandler, whose death occurred at Camden, N. Y., July 27, 1912, was held at the Baptist church at Afton, Thursday at 11:30 o'clock, the Rev. J. C. Crossman, nephews, Stanley Crossman, Harry Eddy, Albert and Frank Eddy, grand-nephews of the deceased. Mrs. Chandler was the eldest child of the late Manen and Susan D. Crossman, who were early residents of this vicinity, coming from Omatia county, N. Y., about 1850, and settling on a farm two miles north of Afton. The deceased was born at Deerfield, Quebec county, N. Y., ninety-two years ago next month. She was united to John Hassett Chandler in February, 1841. Thirty-nine years of their lives were spent in Siam, as missionaries. Since retiring from missionary work, Mrs. Chandler has made her home at Camden, N. Y. Her last visit to Wisconsin was at the time her mother celebrated her one hundredth birthday anniversary, in March, 1903. ## CONSTIPATION IS A MENACE IN SUMMER

Regularity of Bowels Very Important to Health at This Time

At no time should people more closely watch the condition of their bowels than during hot weather. Summer conditions contribute in various ways to cause constipation, but whatever the cause the trouble should be quickly corrected. Constipation, if neglected, leads directly to serious and often fatal disease.

Some people find that certain fruits have laxative effect, but this cannot be depended upon; a mild laxative tonic that will act gently and positively, without griping or shock to the system, is far preferable. The compound of simple laxative herbs with pepsin, known as Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin, is highly recommended as being easy and natural in action, pleasant to the taste, and certain in its effect. A dose of Syrup Pepsin at night will restore normal action in the morning, carrying off the heaviness and bloating. Salts, purgative waters, and cathartics should be avoided as they upset the entire system and afford at best but temporary relief. By cleansing the bowels and removing the foreign matter that irritates and in names the tissues, a spoonful of Syrup Pepsin will quickly check the summer diarrhoea that is so weakening. Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin is sold by druggists for fifty cents a bottle, the larger family size costing one dollar. A free trial bottle can be obtained, postpaid, by writing to Dr. W. B. Caldwell, 406 Washington St., Monticello, Illinois.

The Three Guardsmen

By ALEXANDRE DUMAS

"Do not question me," said the prisoner. "You know that my true Christians are forbidden to speak falsely. When God sees one of his creatures persecuted unjustly, placed between suicide and dishonor, believe me, sir, God pardons suicide."

Milady rose and stepped toward him, crying out with a vehement air:

"Let his victim be sent to the lions the martyr be thrown. Thy God shall teach thee to repent. From the abyss he'll give ear to my moan."

Felton stood before her like one petrified.

"Who art thou, who art thou?" cried he, clasping his hands. "Art thou a messenger from God, art thou a minister from hell, art thou an angel or a demon?"

"Do you not know me, Felton? I am neither an angel nor a demon. I am a daughter of earth; I am a sister of thy faith."

"Yes, yes," said Felton. "I doubted, but now I believe!"

"You believe and still you are an accomplice of that child of Babel, who is called Lord de Winter! You believe and yet you deliver me into the hands of my enemies, of the enemy of England, of the enemy of God!"

"I deliver you up to Buckingham!"

"They have eyes," cried milady, "and they will not see; they have ears and they will not hear."

"Yes, yes," said Felton, passing his hands over his brow, covered with sweat, as if to remove his last doubt. "Yes, I recognize the features of the angel that appears to me every night, crying to my soul which cannot sleep, 'Strike, save England, save thyself!'"

A flash of terrible joy, but rapid as thought, gleamed from the eyes of milady.

Felton saw it and started as if its light had revealed the abysses of this woman's heart. He recalled all at once the warnings of Lord de Winter; but, as if fascinated by this strange creature, he could not remove his eyes from her eyes.

Milady was not a woman to misunderstand the meaning of this hesitation. Before Felton replied she let her hands fall as if the weakness of the woman overpowered the enthusiasm of the inspired fanatic.

"But no," said she. "The sword of the eternal is too heavy for my arm. Allow me then to avoid dishonor by death; let me take refuge in martyrdom. I implore you on my knees—let me die."

At hearing that voice, so sweet and suppliant, at viewing that look, so timid and downcast, Felton reproached himself.

"Alas," said Felton, "I can do but one thing which is to pity you if you prove to me you are a victim! But you, madame, so beautiful in reality, you so pure in appearance, must have committed great iniquities for Lord de Winter to pursue you thus."

"They have eyes," repeated milady, with an accent of indescribable grief, "and they will not see; they have ears and they will not hear."

"But," cried the young officer, "speak—speak them!"

"Confide my shame to you," cried milady, with the blush of modesty upon her countenance. "Oh, never, never, never!"

"But to me, to a brother?" said Felton.

The young officer, in his turn a suppliant, clasped his hands.

"Well, then," said milady, "I confide in my brother. I will dare to—"

At this moment the steps of Lord de Winter were heard, but this time the terrible brother-in-law of milady did not content himself, as on the preceding day, with passing before the door and going away again. He stopped, exchanged two words with the sentinel, then the door opened and he appeared.

During these two words Felton drew back suddenly, and when Lord de Winter entered he was at several paces from the prisoner.

"You have been a long time here, John," said de Winter. "Has this woman been relating her crimes to you? In that case I can comprehend the length of the conversation."

"Ah, you fear your prisoner should escape!" said she. "Well, ask your worthy jailer what favor I was but this instant soliciting of him."

"What favor, pray?" asked Lord de Winter.

"A knife, which she would return to me through the grating of the door a minute after she had received it," replied Felton.

"There is some one then concealed here whose throat this amiable lady is desirous of cutting," said de Winter.

"There is myself," replied milady.

Felton felt a shudder run to the marrow of his bones. Probably Lord de Winter perceived this emotion.

"Mistrust yourself, John," said he. "I have placed reliance upon you, my friend. Beware; I have warned you. But be of good courage, my lad. In three days we shall be delivered from this creature, and where I shall send her to she can hurt nobody."

The baron took the young officer by the arm, turning his head over his shoulder so as not to lose sight of milady till he was gone out.

Milady waited then with much impatience, for she feared the day would pass away without her seeing Felton again. But in an hour she heard some one enter.

"What do you want with me?" said she.

"Listen," replied Felton in a low voice; "I have just sent away the sentinel. The baron has just related a frightful history to me."

Milady assumed her smile of a resigned victim and shook her head.

"Either you are a demon," continued Felton, "or the baron, my benefactor, my father, is a monster. Tonight after 12 I will come and see and listen to you, and you will convince me."

"No, Felton, no, my brother; the sacrifice is too great, and I feel what it must cost you. No, I am lost. Do not be lost with me!"

"Be silent, madame," cried Felton. "and do not speak to me thus. If when you have seen me again you still persist—well, then you shall be free, and I myself will give you the weapon you desire."

"Well," said milady, "for your sake I will wait."

He darted out of the room. As for her, she returned to her place with a smile of savage contempt upon her lips.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

The Fifth Day of Captivity.

MILADY, being well prepared for the reception of Felton, was able to erect her batteries for the next day. She knew she had only two days left.

She should certainly return from her exile; she did not doubt that a single instant, but how long might this exile last? To lose a year, two years, three years, is to talk of an eternity; to return after the death or disgrace of the cardinal, perhaps, to return when D'Artagnan and his friends, happy and triumphant, should have received from the queen the reward they had well acquired by the services they had rendered her!

At 9 o'clock Lord de Winter made his customary visit and examined the window and the bars.

"Well," said he on leaving her, "you will not escape this night!"

At 10 o'clock Felton came and placed the sentinel. Milady recognized his step. Two hours after, as the clock struck 12, the sentinel was relieved.

The new sentinel commenced his walk in the corridor.

At the expiration of ten minutes Felton came.

"Listen," said the young man to the sentinel. "On no pretense leave the door. I am going to pay a second visit to this woman, who, I fear, entertains sinister intentions upon her own life, and I have received orders to watch her. If I call come in. If any one comes call me."

Felton entered milady's apartment. Milady arose.

"I promised you I would come," said Felton, "and I am come."

"You promised to bring a knife and to leave it with me after our conversation. I can have nothing to say to a man who does not keep his word. You may retire. I shall not speak."

"Here is the knife," said Felton, drawing it from his pocket.

"Let me see it," said milady. "Upon my honor I will instantly return it to you. You shall place it on that table, and you may remain between it and me."

Felton held the weapon to milady.

"Well," said she, returning the knife to the young officer, "this is fine and good steel. You are a faithful friend, Felton. If your sister, the daughter of your father, said to you:

"Still young, unfortunately handsome, I was dragged into a snare. I resisted. The religion I serve, the God

I adore, were blasphemed because I called upon that religion and that God, I resisted. Then outrages were heaped upon me, and as my soul was not subdued it was determined to defile my body forever."

"One evening my enemy resolved to paralyze the resistance he could not conquer. One evening he mixed a powerful narcotic with my water. Scarcely had I finished my repast when I felt myself sink by degrees into a strange torpor. I arose. I endeavored to run to the window and call for help, but my limbs refused their office. I endeavored to speak. I could only utter inarticulate sounds, and irresistible faintness came over me. I supported myself by a chair, feeling that I was about to fall, but this support was soon useless for my weak arms. I sank down upon the floor, a prey to a sleep which resembled death."

"I awoke in bed in a round chamber, the furniture of which was sumptuous and into which light only penetrated by an opening in the ceiling. No door gave entrance to the room. It might be called a magnificent prison."

"I arose tremblingly. My clothes were near me on a chair. I neither remembered having undressed myself nor going to bed. I was no longer in the house I had dwelt in. The day was already two-thirds gone. It was the evening before that I had fallen asleep. My sleep, then, must have lasted twenty-four hours."

"I dressed myself as quickly as possible; my slow and stiff motions all attested that the effects of the narcotic were not all yet dissipated. The chamber was evidently furnished for the reception of a woman."

"I made the tour of the room at least twenty times in search of an outlet of some kind. There was none. I sank exhausted with fatigue and terror into a chair. In the meantime night came on rapidly, and with night my terrors increased. Although I had eaten nothing since the evening before, my fears prevented my feeling hunger."

"All at once the noise of a door turning on its hinges made me start. A globe of fire appeared above the glazed opening of the ceiling, casting a strong light into my chamber, and I perceived with terror that a man was standing within a few paces of me."

"A table with two covers bearing a supper ready prepared stood as if by magic in the middle of the apartment."

"That man was he who had pursued me during a whole year, who had vowed my dishonor. He came to offer his fortune in exchange for my love."

"Infamous villain!" murmured Felton.

"All that the heart of a woman could contain of haughty contempt and disdainful words I poured out upon this man. When he thought I had said all he advanced toward me. I sprang toward the table. I seized a knife, I placed it to my breast."

"Make one step more," said I, "and in addition to my dishonor you shall have my death to reproach yourself with!"

"Your death!" said he. "Oh, no; you are too charming a mistress to allow me to consent to lose you thus. Adieu, my charmer. I will wait to pay you my next visit till you are in a better humor."

"At these words he blew a whistle. The globe of fire which lighted the room reascended and disappeared. I found myself again alone and in complete darkness."

"The night passed away without any fresh attempt on the part of my persecutor. Day came. The table had disappeared, only I had still the knife in my hand."

"I was worn out with fatigue. Want of sleep inflamed my eyes. I had not ventured to sleep a single instant. The light of day reassured me. I went and threw myself on the bed without parting with the liberator knife, which I concealed under my pillow."

"When I awoke a fresh table was served."

"This time in spite of my terrors, in spite of my agony, I began to feel a devouring hunger. It was forty-eight hours since I had taken any nourishment. I ate some bread and some fruit; then, remembering the narcotic mixed with the water I had drunk, I would not touch that which was placed on the table, but filled my glass at a marble fountain fixed in the wall."

"The evening came on and with it darkness. But, however profound was this darkness, my eyes began to be accustomed to it. I saw the table sink through the floor. A quarter of an hour after it reappeared bearing my supper, and in an instant, thanks to the lamp, my chamber was once more lighted."

"I was determined to eat only such objects as could not possibly have anything soporting introduced into them. I drew another glass of water.

"Tell me who this man was!" cried the young officer.

"After swallowing a mouthful or two it appeared to me not to have the same taste that it had in the morning. A suspicion instantly seized me. I stopped, but I had already drunk half a glassful of it."

"Half an hour had not passed when the same symptoms began to appear, only as I had drunk only half a glass of the water I contended longer, and instead of falling entirely asleep I sank into a state of drowsiness."

"I dragged myself toward the bed, but I could not reach the bolster. I sank on my knees, my hands clasped around one of the bedposts. Then I felt that I was lost."

Felton became frightfully pale, and a convulsive tremor crept through his whole body."

"And what was more terrible," continued milady, "was that at this time I retained a consciousness of the danger that threatened me."

"I saw the lamp ascend and leave me in darkness. Then I heard the creaking of the door. I felt instinctively that some one approached me. I endeavored to make an effort, I attempted to cry out. By an incredible effort of will I even raised myself up, but only to sink down again immediately and to fall into the arms of my persecutor."

"Tell me who this man was!" cried the young officer.

Milady saw at a single glance all the painful feelings she inspired in Felton, but she would not spare him a single pang.

"Only this time it was no longer an inert body without feeling that the villain had to deal with. I struggled. I heard him cry out:

"These miserable Puritans! I knew very well that they tried out their executors, but I did not think they had been so strong against their lovers!" Alas, this desperate resistance could not last long!

"My first impulse on coming to myself was to feel under my pillow for the knife I had not been able to reach. But on taking this knife, Felton, a terrible idea occurred to me and did not leave me. It is of this that I now bear the punishment."

"Continue, continue!" said Felton. "I am eager to see you attain your vengeance!"

"Oh, I resolved that it should take place as soon as possible. I had no doubt he would return the following night. During the day I had nothing to fear."

"Evening came, the ordinary events were accomplished. I only ate some fruit. After supper I exhibited the same marks of languor as on the preceding evening, but this time, as if I yielded to fatigue, I dragged myself toward my bed, let my robe fall, and got in."

"I found my knife where I had placed it, under my pillow, and, while feeling to sleep, my hand grasped the handle of it convulsively."

"At length I saw the lamp rise softly and disappear in the depths of the ceiling. At length I heard the noise of the door which opened and shut; I heard, notwithstanding the thickness of the carpet, a step which made the floor creak; I saw, notwithstanding the darkness, a shadow which approached my bed."

BY WALT MASON

If every day was sunny, with ne'er a cloud in view, we'd soon be spending money to buy a cloud or two. It always makes me weary when people say: "Old boy, may all your days be cheery and bright and full of joy!" If all my days were sunny, existence would seem flat; if I were fed on honey I'd soon get sick of that. I like a slice of sorrow to hold me down today, for that will make tomorrow seem fifty times as gay: A Little dose of sickness won't make me whine or yell; 'twill emphasize the sickness of life when I am well. A little siege of trouble won't put my hopes in pawn, for 'I'll be trotting double with joy when it is gone. Down there in tropic regions where sunshine gleams all day, the fat and lazy legions just sleep their lives away; there every idle bumpkin who in the sunshine lies, lives like a yellow pumpkin, and like a squash he dies. I want my share of changes, my share of ups and downs; I want a life that ranges from crosses up to crowns.

Advice.
Have something to work for—and then work for it.

Very often.
Weary—I wonder wats de cause of heart trouble?
Ruggles—Why, anybody oughter know that—women.

Harmony in Tastes.
"I met George and his wife this morning going down town. They have such tastes in common."
"Where were they going this morning?"
"She was going shopping for tub suits and he was going to a wash sale."

Mere Curiosity, of Course.
Mrs. A.—"Did you ever go to a fortune teller?"
Mrs. B.—"Yes, once. Before I was married I went to the probate court to see how much my fiance's father had left him in his will."

No proof of it.
Cholly—Why, er—er—I'm growing a mustache.
Daisy—So your sister was telling me.

EYE FOR HARMONY.

Tom—Why does your mistress tie red ribbon on you?

Horse in Warfare.
An army officer, writing of the importance of the horse in warfare, says that automobiles have not appreciably lessened the demand for horses or mules in the army. One of these animals, he says, is needed for every man in a properly equipped military force. Immense numbers of horses perish in every war through starvation, it being almost impossible to provide forage for them during the exigencies of a campaign.

When Disraeli Faltered.
Disraeli was speaking in support of Lord Lytton's motion condemning the evacuation of Kandahar. "My lords," he said, "the key of India is not Merv, or Herat, or"—here came a long pause, and rather painful anxiety in the audience, and then the quiet resumption of the thread—"It is not the place of which I cannot recall the name—the key of India is London."—One Look Back, by the Rt. Hon. G. W. E. Russell.

Children Suffocated in Safe.
Two Swiss schoolboys, aged respectively 10 and 12, met with a horrible death at Coire, the capital of the Canton of Grisons, by suffocation in a steel safe. The other day, while they were playing hide and seek with their comrades. Finding the safe open the little fellows entered it and closed the door, which they could not reopen, and their companions gave up the game after a long search. The parents of the boys were informed of what had occurred, and later discovered the dead bodies of their children.

Persons Answering Fraudulent Advertisements Asked to Notify Gazette.

The Gazette is desirous of keeping out of its columns fraudulent advertising and asks the assistance of its patrons to that end.

There are many number of concerns in the country who make a living through a nicely worded advertisement, offering golden opportunities, and these unscrupulous people find fertile ground for work among the masses.

Many orders are received in the Gazette mail for advertising which are returned as objectionable and where there is a question as to the qualifications the advertisement is omitted.

All newspapers have this experience.

But even with the utmost care there will be an occasional advertisement which will pass the scrutiny of the business department of the paper and find its way into the columns.

The Gazette will deem it a favor if you will report to the office any trouble which may have been experienced through the answering of such an advertisement.
